Dear Bob,

Do you remember the night of June 8, 1961??? Well, if not--that was graduation night, Fell High School, Class of 1961!!! In other words, that was us!!! WOW---Ten years!! I'd say it's time for a reunion--what do you think??

A group of our former classmates are now making plans for a dinner for our FIRST REUNION. Tentative plans are as follows: A dinner will be held Saturday, May 29, 1971, at the Montdale Country Club, Montdale, Pa. The cost will be approximately $10.00 per person or $20.00 per couple. This will include a cocktail hour, dinner, band, midnight buffet and "other refreshments," and also reunion expenses. This is just the beginning of what we hope will be a most enjoyable evening.

Well, as I asked before----"What do you think?" Since the success or failure of the reunion is totally dependent on your participation, won't you please notify us as soon as possible of your intentions? A self-addressed card is enclosed for your convenience. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY NOW. If a sufficient number of classmates are agreeable to the reunion, we will begin the final preparations, and another letter giving complete details will follow.

We are anxiously anticipating a very good turnout and, of course, this is all up to you!! Won't you please try to be present with your spouse, or if you are single, bring a friend---but, most of all, please come!!!!

Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain

Sincerely,

Carole Pierce Narcavage
Carole Pierce Narcavage
Secretary, Class of '61

P.S. If possible, please return the card before January 1, 1971, so that we can start the wheels rolling!!

Dear Bob:

The wood chopper's advance salary arrived this morning and has pleased him in such a mood and spirit that after January 16th, 1971, there will not be a standing tree in New York State. My thank you reverberates on every level —

And look what I have done!
As for the moment, my flight, SR 114, arrives at J.F.K. December 12th between 8:30 and 10:00 p.m. The time reference is as definite as I can make it. The return flight leaves New York January 16, 1971, at 11:35 p.m.

Obviously I need your help and insight to fill the resulting void in the above paragraph. I have enough questions to submerge you in a sea of confusion.

Do you plan to greet your new employee upon his arrival at the airport? And then, you are cordially invited to spend a few days in New Hampshire which I have been told has an excellent lumberjack training course in Tilton-on-the-Winnepesaukee. Because my training is European based,
I felt it best that I begin my preparatory period in New England and then, progress to New York State. To assist me in this transition your insight and presence would be most appreciated. You do have an ability to spot trees?

However, if the above proposal
should be found unacceptable,

Then you shall have³ to give your nephew the further direction. And while he awaits, the following thoughts come to mind: What are your plans prior to December 25th? When do you finish at Oswego? Would you like to come to New Hampshire? Can we spend a few days together in Washington, D.C., after January 1st.
Is it possible that a reservation
can be made at the Homestead for a day so that I can have a conversation with your family? What time period is the best for my working visit to Oswego? Etc., etc.

Bob, my present thought is to continue from New York to New England (Boston) the evening of the 12th of December either by plane, train or bus. I have suggested that my parents

meet me in New York at J.F.K.
the evening of my arrival; yet,
I shall have to await their response. If it is impossible, then I think that I will proceed with my plan as written. Realizing that you may not be finished with courses at Oswego, you may be unable to continue with me to New England. For this case can you come later at any time you wish.

My second thought is to stay with my family until the 1st of the New Year. Then I would like to have a few days in Washington, a day with your family, and my prolonged visit to Oswego. If this should take me to the 9th or 10th of January, then I would still have another week
with my family before I return is Genial. Please write and let me know your thoughts, reactions

and suggestions.

My two greatest hopes are that you can spend a few days with me and my family and then I can spend a few days with you including a visit to the Homeland. It seems realistic to me to include the period between December 25 and January 1st
unless you feel differently.

What is definite is that I arrive the evening of the 12th December at J. F. H. And I should very much like to see you there and say thank you.
Can it be done?

Bob, with whom next week
I have to be living. At the moment I feel confident. We shall have to see. One development that you must know is that I am now an Assistant to a Professor and the Department of International Relations. Although it can not be made definite until after my exams, I have actually begun. I am assisting with a Conference of undergraduate students and am really pleased!

It also means that I receive an increase in my scholarship which may allow me to apply for your Twenty-five-year-plan
instead of the present Fifty-year-arrangement. My back is quite relieved.

Now I have to turn to studies.
is plan become more definite or range (a few definitions of it is possible) and shall be in touch. Yet, I eagerly await your letter of insight and reaction to the earlier thoughts of this letter. My very best to you, always, Carl

Dear Bob:

It is done ————— // // //
And so I shall be going before
I have myself in the week of show. After an hour and a half of an oral examination
in my dissertation subject on Tuesday late afternoon - early evening, I learned yesterday that my grade was an
A, as solid as the rock of Chetani. Dr. Jankovic is so feeling that he would look a shade of color totally new today...

There is a change in arrival time. I now shall land at F.F.K. on Saturday afternoon, December 12th, at 2:20 p.m. Flight number is 135 - Swiss Air. So bye much ² that you can make it to the airport on the 12th and that if possible,

you can continue with me
to New Hampshire. With the rather unusual time we can at least have an afternoon in New York on the 12th if you agree. Excuse how I hope this makes sense for I am too dead to render a re-reading.

Promise a letter over the weekend but now I want this to make the evening
mail - See you soon,

Dear Bob:

Slowly my mind and body are emerging from the state of academic coma that they have known since your departure. But it shall take a few more days.

It was good to have a report on the 'Autumn Glut'. Gladly we can discuss the passing of 'Le Grand Général'. Though it is a tragedy that you did not follow the service at Joke. Darn and then at Colombey - les. Deux. Egline. I have saved for you a copy of 'Le Monde' the day of his death. This I shall bring to New York on Saturday. The two services provided every existing contrast in the society of France. I was quite moved!

I do hope you can be at the airport Saturday afternoon,

the 12th. As I have written, I am scheduled to land at 2:30 p.m. You have the Swiss Air flight number.

My parents have decided to meet me - or us - in Boston.
I shall call you when I arrive and have made a flight reservation for Boston. If you can not come immediately to New England, we will have a few hours in the afternoon and early evening together.
It is my hope that your program will enable you to come directly to New England
though I realize that this is dependent upon other factors. If you can not join me on the 12th, we will have a game in N.Y. to adjust our schedules for your visit. My family is quite anxious to see you and whatever time you wish to come is

For you to decide³. My only hope is that it will be long and before Christmas Day.

The vague thoughts as to travel
which I expressed in my earlier letter remain open for your interpretation. I do want to have a few days in Oswego. Can you inquire as to the distance between Oswego and Hyde Park, N.Y.? If I have the chance to take a break from chopping, I would like to visit the Roosevelt Library. Maybe I can make this visit while I am with you. We can discuss this while in New York.

The week ahead is taking shape
and erasing the impression that I shall arrive in N.Y. exhausted.
The past few days since the result of my exams was made known have found me in varying states of shock. I am hardly wait to tell you the details and impressions. All I need say is that when I learned I had a 5.5 out of 6 in my dissertation. Major subject, I went into the next world. And I have decided to remain there for a few more days.

Bob, I do hope you will be at the airport Saturday. If I find no sign of you, I will check with Swiss-Air to learn if you have left a message.
I hope that the change in arrival
time did not disturb your plans.
Until Saturday afternoon around 2:30 p.m. Take care - my best always.

Love,
Carl

Dear Mr. Powell,

Thank you for your letter reminding me of the Nomination for Candidacy. I have taken care of this now and it should be in the hands of the Graduate School by Wednesday or so. As you probably know, the five-year limit begins from the day you passed the oral examination.

I trust that everything is going well for you in New York. You may have heard that Professor Houston has been ill this semester. Earlier he was in the hospital for two weeks and has just returned for a gall bladder removal. Otherwise everything here is rather peaceful, somewhat unusual for us.

Let me know if there is anything we can do for you. Above all, remember to keep at the dissertation even if you feel as though you were Roland in the pass.

December 8, 1970

Dear Bob,

Returning to Bloomington after such a completely enjoyable vacation, in particular my visit with you, can only have been a disillusionment. Just those few days of bliss were enough to make clear to me again the oppressive-ness of my ~~landrum~~ existence here. I wonder even more now how I will muster the courage to bear this incredible agony for just a few months more, after seeing how it is when I escape ~~from~~ it. I really did enjoy my visit tremendously, and thank you, thank you, but why did it all have to end? It was great fun meeting everyone, and hopefully I can return your hospitality when you visit Bloomington, or New York, or wherever.

By the way, my trip back to Bloomington on Saturday was some kind of marathon. The whole thing took me twelve hours, including a three hour wait in the bus station. To keep myself busy, I picked up a copy of Erich Segal's Love Story, read it in an hour, the last fifteen minutes of which I sat in the middle of the place with tears rolling down my face, with all the bus station habitués staring in wonder. Somehow, however, I didn't feel all that foolish. I suppose after all the intense experiences of that week, all I needed was some kind of catalyst, sort of like seeing Goodbye Mr. Chips. Of course, I cried all the way through that movie!

Speaking of visits, I do hope that you've thought again of coming to New York before Christmas. I've talked to Sarah, and she is anxious to see you again, have company, show off her new body, entertain, and all. This time she won't get sleepy, because she's been taking DexamyI for her diet, and never gets tired, and never shuts up! If you're still interested (two beautiful women, after all) I will go there on Friday the 18th (a week from Friday already). Sheryl and Arty have already decided to take her car, leave at 6:00 AM, and get to the city by 8:00 PM or so. My parents will be arriving for Christmas in the city on Wednesday. Just to tantalize you a little, we can: do Christmas shopping (a must for me), see all the lights and Rockefeller Center and Macy's Christmas windows, eat in Chinatown, go to my favorite bar, go to the top of the Empire State Building, eat German chocolate cake in a neat place in the village, eat Spanish, Italian, Greek, Japanese, French or whatever food or even Mama Leone's, make a snowman on 39th st. if it snows, go to the opera, ride the subway, or stare into one another's eyes for hours, or whatever else you want to do. Of course, you have a place to stay at Sarah's, and I don't see how you could possibly not be interested since I am going to be there, and I've been sewing things for the holidays. I hope you'll call or write and let me know--okay?

swinger with the world at her feet and all that. But somehow no one has moved into my living room yet.

One note--Michael had a party Saturday, a lot of faculty came, and Mrs. Hedrick came in a striped pantsuit. She looked absolutely spectacular!. I told her all about Oswego, and she is pleased to know that it is all working out well, and then got a gleam in her eye and said something about maybe they'd have a job there for a "young lady", like me, I suppose? Oh, and guess what I'm teaching next semester--491, and the other day Hope took me in his office and sat me down so that we could figure out when I wanted to teach. It looks like I will have the evening section, which is fine with me, and which means that my earliest class will be at 12:30. If I get out of here fast, I'll never have to teach at 7:30. But, then again, if I go out into the big working world I'll be working every morning.

See you in a bit, okay?

"It could be anywhere!" he said.
But deep inside I knew how wrong he was.
I would not argue
Or debate my cause.

For it was mine, you see.
I had counted every snowflake
Felt the brush of every tree
So where it was, was no mistake.

With my bare hands I'd cut its logs
And set them in their places
And mixed the summer's mud
To chink up all the spaces.

So now it sits deep in the winter woods
Hemmed in by trees and snow.

I cannot help but call it mine
It must be the cabin that I know.

How often I've stirred its fire
Tossed on another chunk of wood
So glad that it was mine
For imagination to dwell in when it could.

From the woods I've watched the window glow
And caught its warmth at night
When coming back from tasks I'd done
Reaching homeward for its light.

Maybe I've forgotten where it sat
In just which time or space
Perhaps this cabin's warmth is everyone's
And it is: Everybody's Place!

Cher Robert,

As you've probably gathered from the address, we aren't in Montreal.

Things didn't work out for a job with the Canadian government, so we decided to come back to Anchorage. It wasn't a move we made with "joy in our hearts", but the economics of the situation dictated it. Presently I'm working at a temporary job with a travel agency. It's a lousy job, both pay-wise and otherwise, but puts bread in our mouths. I had a very good position lined up with the Alaska Office of Economic Opportunity as an economic development officer for rural areas. However, a recent State election has put that in limbo. Though I still hope to get the job, no action can ~~be~~ be taken to fill the position until early January, when the governor appoints a new OEO director.

If, and when, I do get it, it will be great; lots of travel, plenty of responsibility and $1200⁰⁰
per month.

Madeline is huge! A trait inherited from her mother's family, she says. Anyway, it looks as though the "little bugger"
is just around the corner, so to speak.

We received your card from Europe, and trust you had a good vacation. You must write us about it, at length, and, of course, about how it is in Oswego. How do you like the snow country? I do hope you are planning to give a go at skiing this year. I'm sure you'd enjoy it thoroughly, and it would give you a great excuse to fly up here sometime, and sample some of our Alaskan "white stuff" and scenery. Consider it a standing invitation, even if it does seem to come from a little far out in left field. Alaska would certainly be, ... well, uh, ... different than Europe.

Dear Bob:

As breakfast was being served, the Swiss - Air pilot announced: "In a moment off to the left you can see Land's End ..." I nearly dialed the operator...

And today having observed the latest 'spot-remover' demonstrations at the Platte, make me once more want to establish a connection with the operator!

How are you? I still sense the impact of the wind upon my face, the security of friendship during a winter - October afternoon and the warmth of communication in comprehending expression - a source of enrichment.

Last week I became buried in work. Mrs. Steinert greeted me with few pleasantries; then she gave my life one academic direction.² In addition to this weekly report I also have a presentation to make next Tuesday on my thesis subject.

The first few days I found myself quite lost. Physically you arrive 'on time'; yet mentally and emotionally
the crossing required a few extra hours. Maybe I shall never know exactly where I am (this thought has already brought a cigarette to my hand) - During the hours in Oswego,
I felt we were older; maybe it is your presence of professionalism which I deeply respect. Yet, I sincerely believe that we do not have an age. What horizons this reveals -

For a further to the latter does Land's God yet have a perspective?
The thought gains force each day.
When the moment occurs, let me
have your thoughts.

My hope is that all is well with you - a greeting to them whom I know - and shortly, you shall hear from me - Sincerely,
Paul

This picture reminds me of your Alpine trip. We went over to W. Palm Beach for 3 days to visit Oluzynx Jacob (from Moscow) at her brother's home. Next Monday we are going to Florida Keys for a day or two. The weather has been cool but the days have been warm. From weather reports I guess you are having real winter. How are your boats? - Mom

Dear Bob,

It hurts ... To know the content of your last letter leaves me agape. The fact that I had not heard from you had me concerned; yet, I never imagined what came to pass.

Bob, if there is anything I can do for you in the next few months, please let me know. For example, if you go to Washington in June, I will gladly write Joan and ask if you can stay with them during the process of relocation. This could be quite convenient for you.

As if you want to have a sum of money by June, I will send all that I can.

Whatever comes to mind you can communicate through letters. I only wish to assure you that I am with you.

As to the modifications in our plans, I understand. Rand's end can only slightly made! I think it best that you hold the slides and we can, then, make an arrangement this summer. When I have my next scholarship, I shall break the goblets. The only way to determine the cost is to send one to you which I shall do. Within the next two weeks providing that I find a similar goblet, I shall send one your way.

Then I suggest that you discover a substantial wine or sparkling Burgundy with which you should be able to persuade the New York State Legislature in its more proper perspective. As for Oswego, it will have to weather its wind.

The latter element has been soft this winter providing more sun and days of spring than Geneva generally enjoys in February. City, lake and park remain an irresistible attraction and diversion. With your recent letter in hand, I took a long walk through and along the afore-mentioned. The swans and gulls comprehend all - !

Personal work for Mrs. Stewart, reading for my theme and arriving students in their work have been major preoccupations. The last few weeks after my return found me busy. Then, I had to have an operation to have a wisdom tooth removed, but took an hour and a half of joyful labor. This past Thursday I had the stitches removed. The dominating effect was a kind of numbness and loss.

Glancing beyond today I can tell you that I intend to return to the States the end of June - beginning of July. Remaining until the end of October, I plan to spend two months in Washington and two at the Russell Library in New York. I am uncertain as to the order in which I shall spend my visit. Future letters should bring clarification or further conclusion. The distillate as a result of my visit to the far increased my monthly allotment;

plans to cover my expenses for the summer and will also continue my scholarship during the period that I am in the U.S. That morning after the Assistant-Director had conveyed the news, I did not know ground until I reached the 'port du Mont Blanc'. Also, I am able to take another Swiss Express flight which saves on cost and provides such agreeable transport.

If you should follow the plans you outlined in your letter 'Domb', then I have the distinct impression that in the next 100, thousand years, but by and by, shall once again orbit in a hydrogen society. I wonder if Miss Vandergame will be receiving this message and, or, fall. That alone will make certain my plans.

Bob, a seminar is forthcoming; therefore I must close for the moment. What ever you do, please keep a safe distance from the Lake. My best always.
P.S. Grand Hotel, etc. next letter. Love

Dear Bob:

Sitting upon an oriental carpet
(left by Dick until he settles in Paris), preparing a cup of coffee and listening to 'France Musique', you come to mind -

However, in more concrete terms I suspect that it was your recent 'Ode to Joy' and 'Weather in Oswego' that also came to the forefront of my thought-scheme for the evening.
Whichever, I do feel like writing.

You need never excuse yourself for what you wrote. And if it helps to have a target in Geneva at which you can aim your wrath or whatever, then,
as you know, I am well-served.

Without touching the core of philosophy,
tomorrow remains very much indefinable.

Yet, for you I hold little doubt.

Whereas how you or anyone can survive that 'Winter' is beyond me.

This past Tuesday evening I reacquainted myself with the Grand Theatre. The performance was La Flûte enchantée by Mozart. Impressions were several: just to be at the Theatre I found quite enjoyable; the style of female dress was captivating revealing bust and femur lines of varying degree; the music is very pleasant with an admirable presentation by the Orchestre de la Suisse romande; the décors et costumes were by Oskar Schoschko, the celebrated Austrian, - Yew were splendid - the hall of priests and the temple; the voices varied in quality and there were only one or two arias that made "that" impression (having just changed radio-stations I have found a recording of what I am presently describing - rather weird); the set changes, I think, were too many and made the length of time (3 1/2 hours) too obvious; yet through the eyes of this amateur I beheld an enjoyable experience.

Tomorrow evening with a British colleague I am seeing Genet's Belshazzar's Feast at la comédie. This is being performed by the Strasbourg Theatre Company. Although I have only read half of the play (tomorrow I hope to finish it), the subject and approach interest me. Are you familiar with the play? A future evening will relate the details.

Then, Monday evening I return to the Grand Theatre to see the Robert Harkness Ballet Company. For this I am quite anxious. Although I have read of the company and its performances, this is the first chance I have had to see them. Again, another future evening...

In April there will be an evening at Beluchine at the Grand Theatre, then later, Lulu and Lohengrin. All three I hope to be able to see.

As for concerts I am not certain what the next few months hold. But now that time is more abundant I trust that I shall include them in my 'evening-out' repertoire.

What however remains present in the latter are films: Bergman's The Passion left that Bergmanian effect of individual emptiness for both his actors and this member of the audience - he is moving for this is the first time that a hint of God's "raison d'être," forgiveness appears - his manner, style, editing and physics were enhanced by the presence of color, in particular U. Thelander - for me Bergman is a 'tour de force' - can one say that he likes Bergman? - until I resolve that mental-emotional complication, I can only assure you that I appreciate him - to make him relative, yes another rhetorical question, I do not know; Lebeuch's Le Voyage is as the French say his first 'police film' - his sense of sound and color I find absorbing - his talent to edit a film though now somewhat stereotyped is engaging - the subject is light and told through flashback - saw it on a Sunday afternoon with a friend and this was a grand combination. Lean's Peter's Daughter: A Story of Love - my impression is that with this film either you do or do not - I am, happily, maybe even strongly, with the former; for me Lean is a question of feels and with this film I found several - the presence of the village fool makes and unmakes the story which situated on the coast of Ireland was romantic naturalism - the young British Major was extremely well-played providing and controlling a memorable scene in an Irish Pub - the only argument not to consider is that it is just another 'Dr. Shogun'; Streisand's On a Clear Day - another either you do or... need I write more - several scenes were fortunately all Barbra - one where she seduces an English property owner with a wine glass - splendid - and another with the reoccurring line: 'Get off my roof' - out of the ^{context} of the film this falls; but if you have the chance, catch it at the Oswego Palace - Zimmerman's A Man For All Seasons - "Don't be a teacher. But who will know; You, your students, God - not a bad public. Dassin's La Promesse de l'aube - with Melina Mercuri who has some very memorable moments in this semi-documentary on the early life of Benito Gory.

In between the above I have been reading for my thesis. Hope to have the pre-memoire finished in rough draft by the end of March. This will be twenty-five to thirty pages of suspect defense and approach. With approval I can continue with the primary research this summer. Concerning the latter plans remain much the same.

during our vacation - There seems to be a complication with my scholarship that I must resolve in the next few days for I am not certain how much money I was to receive for next month - when this becomes clear I will have a better idea about my resources. Nevertheless the idea of work for two or three weeks is not too offensive.

There is a chance that I can go to Vienna with the Institute and visit their school of Diplomacy. This would be between the 21st and 26th of March. The snag is that for ten places in the trip there are at least four times that number in applicants. With all expenses paid for a week the opportunity is good. Shall have to let you know.

Work with Mac. Stincer continues to bring reward. Have been assisting students with outlines, bibliographies, subject-approach criticism, etc. Yet, I am so anxious, Bob, to give my own seminar. (Have just prepared my third cup of coffee) There is little need to elaborate with this thought.

8

Mac. Steinert gives me great, I should write complete flexibility. And we have a relationship that I enjoy. As for your water-voyage proposal with her and Dorothea, I would properly and most likely give my impression of 'Canadian Sunset'. It merits thought.
When the proclamation is made, it shall be communicated. Could you provide as an alternative Handel's 'Water Suite'.

Weather, Geneva, Lake, Park and I are still with early Spring. If there has been a quilt factor, I have some how missed it.

Stay well and shoot another pro-jective at this target as soon as you can - say hello to the Department for me. My best always,

Carl

I just don't understand where your head can be at. Ever since our little chat tonight I've been trying to figure it out-I must say with little success. God, if you called me and asked me to lend you some money, If I had it I'd lend it to you for whatever reason you wanted it. I really can't understand you saying "Have you tried Carbondale." That's really incredible. Is it that hard for you to extend yourself beyond yourself. We all have to look out for ourselves but this is pretty ridiculous. I don't think I respect you right now. I'd prefer that we ~~didn't~~ didn't discuss it nor communicate ~~for~~ for a while. I have a feeling that someday you're going to look around and find yourself in your comfortable magnificence very lonely. Not alone but lonely. I guess I'm just shocked. Enough. I hope you get my point.

Granted my loan request "reason" was not the best in the world but I don't think that even enters into the whole thing.

Dear Bob -

I found this Christmas Check in with our Christmas Cards when I got home. I don't know whether you didn't get it in the first place or if it was just put in there by mistake, if it was my fault I'm sorry - just cash it in a hurry.

We are back in schedule I guess. It is good to be home. I guess I'm just a northern girl at heart because I don't think I could take the hot weather most of the year. The last weekend was hot & muggy - good to get away from it.

Hope I'll see you this weekend - no blizzards or floods because that is the next thing to think about when all this snow melts. The snow drifted badly - our front yard really has piles of snow - nothing like Dravos tho - I'm sure.

Dear Bob:

With a good cold that has entered its second day and confirmed that Spring is here, I have had the pleasure to have one of 'those' Sundays - full of newspapers, one of Geneva and another of London; music, both classical and contemporary; lunch at the Cassine nearby; an hockey (ice) game in the afternoon at the end of which Switzerland became the World Champion of Group B meaning that she will play in Group A next year (you might use the preceding in a trivia game at the 'Café'; whatever I have no idea); and presently dinner which is a macaroni salad that I took from Brigitte's this past Friday evening after having lost all self-control when initially confronted with it.

It seems that I should be recalling some reactions: to a Grand play, Le Balcon, to an evening of Bach's Cello - so brilliantly rich, an organ recital at the Cathedral, another film or two, a recent work of fiction, but that for the moment I find heavy. My preference is to share a travel plan with you - yes, I shall return to the preceding paragraph - not, I thought you would more like to know that I am going at the beginning of April to Yugoslavia and the sea.

Actually it was the early morning after having seen the Grand play and a birthday party in France, that Eva (6'10"), Peter and I returned here for coffee and conversation, which in turn led us to the Buffet to gaze, when Peter and Eva began discussing Dubrovnik, Split and the island, Tenc, between the two. To the latter I have decided to sign my future presence. And so, after a few days of sea and sun, a plan to visit Dubrovnik via Dubrovnik. No historical context I doubt is necessary.

With the thought of the preceding paragraph coloring in my mind, I have had two weeks of progress regarding my pre-arrangement. With these dates of hope to be able to leave by scheduled train Split and or and for Rijeka just beyond Trieste. From the former I shall take the boat to Rome, a half day journey. The only condition is that I have to return to Geneva by 19th. Between these dates I shall behold a part of Eastern Europe and the sea... Each day of Rome slightly more anxious.

What I hope you realize is that I have neither included the Black Sea nor Land's End in this Spring fantasy. It would more appropriate to leave there for an unknown moment in the future. So much the idea of waves, sun and a better suit became too much.

The past few weeks have become a treasure - days of profitable research and evenings of conversation over beer with Peter and other colleagues and friends.

Different cafes and bars have provided the background for the latter, while the library in the pink house has kept me entertained during the days and early evenings. Excluding my own deadline the pressure is non-existent. Ideas and thoughts mature on their own creating the broad framework in which I hope to place my dissertation. Recently I have been reading in sociology, psychology, international relations theory, philosophy and history. The notes accumulate and next week I think that I will try the first - rough draft.

The evening of Le Balcon had moments of brilliance. Having read the play before, there was no problem with the dialogue though the vocabulary was quite an exercise. The story revolves in a brothel managed by Mme. Arna and the staff while a revolution is taking place in the outside world. Providing room for the main male character, Mme. Arna allows her clients to follow their assumed roles and reality changes. For such a manner the real becomes surreal; the role becomes self; and life becomes death when the ultimate realization occurs. Although there are two scenes of extreme length which result in unevenness and there was a staging problem with the final scene, in entirety it was quite enjoyable. The female cast was far superior to the male with Mme. Arna and staff controlling the stage. It was a memorable evening.

The same is true for the Hartman Ballet. In fact, I would go further - it was the most exciting evening of Ballet that I have seen. Modern, alive and challenging are adequate as a means of description.

One piece, "Lovers of Sordano," which is introduced in an intense manner, I found dragging in impact.
A sane girl is committed to the asylum and over whom occurs a number of jealous. At the end she shows her reason and kills the earlier assassin.
Quoted to the music of Britten and conveyed in a very dramatic manner, this ballet is full not to be forgotten. Two other works completed the total effect of a young, capable, well-trained company. It was a joy.

Another evening with Lida I went to an organ recital of Mozart and Vivaldi at the Cathedral. A source of relaxation and introspection, my mind wandered from people to places to feelings. The distance of self to another gave me a sensation of nakedness before the music. As strange as this seemed and as unexpected as it was, I am anxious to attend another in the near future.

For films I have seen "The Killing of Sister George" (yes, we are somewhat behind) and Powell's film on Thursday which in English & Latin is titled "The Music Lovers". The latter for both technique and performance is remarkable. If you should see this and I strongly hope that you do, I would love to have your reaction. Beryl Reid provides a performance in the former which borders on being classic. She is so bloody English! My only objection is to the final Arabian scene which in itself is moving,

But in its placement in the film, at the end, is unnecessary. Also there are moments when the tension seems forced; yet, for the main performance and character development another film that I think you should see.

As you may have perceived, it is no longer Sunday evening. At the moment we are in middle week. Tonight I have played bridge with a group of fellow students. The past few weeks have given several such evenings in which I have no objection. One more thing that I have learned to manage in time. I simply take the game regardless in which language it must be said my friends.

From your latest letter I deduced that you are most pleased with the current semester. That is wonderful! This summer when we find ourselves together, I hope you will continue to help me with my French.

But, for the moment, I shall close. When you have the chance do let me hear from you. I kind all progresses well for you -

Sincerely
Carl

Dear Bob:

Good to hear from you — And to realize that even my letters have the potential to leave a path of conviction.

Yes, the island is Near. Not certain what I spelled in my last letter, I can only attempt to write more clearly.

Although it began when I had my 'galeau au fromage' at the Grand Savoye for lunch, it was only one step inside the Rhodan that brought you into full focus. To answer another question, today our demonstrator was gestikulating behind several goldfish bowls with a microphone forcing wind currents in the air about her. Yes, today it was goldfish — tomorrow by then, I have decided to leave the world. It caused uncontrollable laughter and as I was obviously alone, some awkward stares. I think I should place this remarkable woman in one of those plastic bags that you requested and deposit her at the F. B. I. I think entrance to J. G. F. is. When all of this had come to pass, my only wish was that you had been here.

What have you learned concerning Olego? The ladies are beyond annoyance for what your long-distance compromise is remarkable. I am most anxious to know what you decide.

It is regrettable that my two pages (?) of film gossip were read by nearly innocent eyes. Thinking that I would enjoy an air-mail 'Blow-up', I must now shift tactics and, I gather, seats.

In the process of the above, I have attended a most revealing concert and jolting ballet. The former was an evening with Barbara at the Grand Theatre which was not exactly the right place, though her personality reached the front row of the most-removed gallery. Do you know her? If I were slightly more coherent in memory, maybe I would recall a conversation during which she appeared. Half talking, half-singing makes her vocal style of interest. What I was unable to perceive was whether an evening in her presence would prove separate or only provide the initial hours of admiration. Therefore, I went and for two and half hours the latter impression took hold of me. Because you know that my whole outlook can change with a song,
 you should not be surprised to learn that this has now occurred with Barbara. The song is 'L'air le noir' and is also the title of her latest album. Severe in features and dress, she performs with movements between that of a bird and a cat. The evening was a total 3187 surprise!

Then, most fortunately, a friend invited me to the Ball so that I would not miss Calcutta's latest production. The two classical pieces, one of Mozart and the other of Tchaikovsky, were pleasant. It was a compilation of Quaker songs, danced in a modern style that provided the high point of the evening. Another modern piece to which we went further and took that additional time for me to both sing and appreciate.

We are now more or less to this part of the day when my chauffeur duty began for an extended weekend. I was invited by my sister and mother from Scotland to spend two weeks in the Alps near Geneva. Effortless mental preoccupation had us ready a car late Saturday afternoon and leaving for the Alps the following afternoon after a late Sunday morning. From that moment till late Monday evening there were few moments of non-laughter.

The village where they are staying is Fouvent and the chateau is located on the northern side of the valley providing continuous sunlight and one of those views of the Alps that is not too unlovely. The weekend we began on our main excursion last summer. Sunday evening we had dinner in the village and then,

went drinking and dancing in a club beyond Gorod. Monday was fruitless sunbathing and reading while in the late afternoon we went to Poland for shopping and dinner. That evening I returned to Geneva.

Since my return I have been organizing
my departure for Yugoslavia and ~~Italy~~ Albania. At six a.m. Saturday morning I take the train for Rome where I shall stay
at least until Sunday afternoon or Monday.
I can write for the moment little further for I simply have no definite plans. However,
cards and letters shall come your way.
I am quite anxious!

When you have a phone send a word to let me know what direction, if it is that severe, life has taken. In the interim my best always,

Paul

P.S. Would that my return date to New York is true it - can you spend the 4th (July) with me and my family in N.Y.? It would bring great pleasure. After the 4th
I think I shall be in Hyde Park for two months in Washington. Do let me know of your trip to the Father. If I am not completely lost, I might be Henry Bloom Person!

Dear Bobly - po o,

I'm writing to at least save us a little bread. I talked to Russ's friend in California & asked him many questions about Columbia. Assez interesting - He said there was competition, but that it could easily be avoided by cultivating one's garden. One thing I particularly liked was that he told me he did not write one word of French the entire time he was there. That sounds fantastic.

Still haven't heard from Buffalo. I called today & talked to a prog Secretary. Worrie. They should be notifying ^{me} in the next few days. (over)

I will call you the minute I hear from them.

How's things by you? What's new?
Have you heard anything about your
"posicione cruciada" - for next year?

In any case, I ~~think~~ ^{well} have everything solved in about a week.

N.Y.C. is looking good. Keep it loose.

Dear Bob:

Have your latest letter and is good to hear from you.

For the moment I will hold my impressions, reactions and emotions from my visit to Venice and Yugoslavia. An evening later this week will give me the unknown number of hours that I shall need to relate the substance of my vacation. Today our Summer Semester began and I am in the midst of movements toward organization. Hope you understand.

Yet, I have to respond and delightfully it is, to some aspects of your letter.

I return on the 27 June, for it is the first student flight that I can take considering my responsibilities here this semester. Your idea to come to J.F.K. is grand and I should think that we could then continue to Tilton-on-Winnisquam the same day. This would enable us to be with my family until the 4th of July. Is this agreeable with you?

Then on the 5th July, I, and the thought of us I find superb, intend to make my way and appear in Hyde Park.

Today I received from the Director of the Roosevelt Library in addition to my request for catalogue guides, etc., the addresses of people who have rooms for rent in the village of Hyde Park. He has indicated that there is the possibility to have one or two rooms. It is my preference to rent a room rather than stay in a motel. To do this together would be in a continuation of my former adjective, superlative.

Therefore, can you stay in Hyde Park from 5 July to 31 August?

To give Hyde Park a geographical and I should also think a research context, it is quite close to Poughkeepsie, New York, the home of Vassar College. Though I do not know and I have doubt that you could find an adequate library in Hyde Park, the library at Vassar could be of assistance. Also we would only be an hour and a half to two hours from New York City by train or bus. This would be another possibility if the need arises. And as a final thought Hyde Park is on the Hudson, a little North and on the opposite bank than Newburgh. Maybe one summer evening we might find Brother Agnew in the neighborhood bar.

Bob, I would like to reserve a room for me or us as soon as possible. This will enable me to know how much money I shall need for these two months. As you know, the Institute is my financial source for this research visit. 3195

If I had this information prior to when I meet with the Assistant Director in June, it would be helpful.

Can you write and relate your reactions to the above? Then I will write and arrange what I can with the thought of two rooms together for us or separate rooms in the same house as the preferable alternative. Your haste would be appreciated!

After the 31 August, I plan to spend a week including Labour Day with my family, then I shall go to Washington. In the latter I shall be till the middle of October. Following another week or two with my parents, I return to Geneva the 31 October, which is the latest student flight that I can have. While in Washington I shall live with Bill and Jan as you already know.

Because I want to get this in the mail immediately, I promise a 'different' letter within the week. For packing you have every blessing which I can extend and for living in New York City come September my delight. Hope to hear from you soon and with my best, always,

Far/
P.S. The thought of this summer brings great pleasure and excitement.

Dear Bob,

How's tricks? Just that I'd tell you that the night we came home from taking you to Oswego - it was just starting to rain & freeze as we got home ^{at 8:30} the next morning the ground was white, at least an inch of snow. so we took Russ, Ann, Laurie, April and William up to Cayuga Lake. It was very windy so there weren't as many geese & ducks but if we saw 40,000 birds you we saw 30,000 the next day - the geese & ducks weren't so near the road across the Potato fields - we couldn't identify - blue geese but we saw the swans and most of the kinds of ducks. I think there was a difference of 6 or 7 in count. It was quite a day - Ann forgot the baby spoon so we used a piece of orange skin as a spoon and finally bent the dish and poured it in - she forgot a bottle too so we had to buy one.

Russ just came in with Laurie & April so - He is putting new board on the porch. See you soon - Mom

MUSIC

Stravinsky at 88: Liberator, architect of time, Einstein of music

Igor Stravinsky, 1882-1971

The past preoccupied Igor Stravinsky toward the end of his life. "I tug at my memory as a mountain climber tugs at his rope: to see how and where it is tied." Last week, frayed and stretched to the breaking point by restless years of climbing the peaks of music, the rope of time gave way and the greatest composer of the century was dead at 88.

In his life he had tackled all the mountains. Whenever he exhausted them he created his own. "We have a duty toward music," he said. "Namely to invent it." His inventions were revolutions, explosions that blew away the sterile hangover of late nineteenth-century German romanticism. On his way to some peak of purity, Stravinsky resuscitated classical form, introduced startling new concepts of rhythm and sonority, and gave the intellect parity with emotion.

His influence was immeasurable. Not even his arch rival, Arnold Schoenberg, could be untouched. Erik Satie called him "liberator." Aaron Copland and Roger Sessions were in the vanguard of an American legion anxious to join the neo-classic bandwagon. Paul Hindemith transferred his loyalty from Schoenberg. George Balanchine called Stravinsky "the architect of time" and their collaboration on "Apollon Musagète" in 1928 "the turning point of my choreography. So economic was the music, that I too saw how I could eliminate and find the only inevitable movement." Avant-garde composer Karlheinz Stockhausen says that Stravinsky "is the only modern composer who has continually renewed himself."

Always Stravinsky was on the move, expanding horizons with more than 100 compositions of astonishing diversity, embracing theater, as in his opera "The Rake's Progress" (1951), as easily as religion in his "Mass" (1948), leaving behind a trail of successive masterpieces including "The Firebird" (1910), "Histoire du Soldat" (1918), "Symphony of Psalms" (1930), "Symphony in C" (1940). He embodied the twentieth century in his restlessness, driven by quenchless creativity and by circumstances that had made him an exile from his homeland and a rootless wanderer on the earth. He could not reconcile the schism that made him the natural son of Russia and its traditions, and the adopted son of the West.

Threshold: Stravinsky was born in 1882 at Oranienbaum, on the Gulf of Finland, where his father, Feodor, a leading basso of the Imperial Opera in St. Petersburg, had a country house. In spite of his musical background, Stravinsky began composing late and was 21 when he became a pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov. He soon came to the attention of Serge Diaghilev, who commissioned a score from him based on the Russian fairy tale "The Firebird," to be given in Paris by Diaghilev's Ballets Russes. On the day Stravinsky arrived at rehearsal, Diaghilev turned to Nijinsky and Pavlova and said, "Look at him. There is a man on the threshold of fame."

He crossed it immediately. "The Firebird" (1910), "Petrouchka" (1911) and "The Rite of Spring" (1913) came so close together they sounded like one explosion. Although Stravinsky had not yet shed the influence of Rimsky-Korsakov, his ballets were tonal rather than chromatic, the sounds were new and refined, melody stood out, the startlingly original rhythms darted this way and that. "The Firebird" was sumptuously Oriental, "Petrouchka" utilized the realism of a village fair, and "The Rite," barbaric in its yawp, shocking in its story of ritual murder, and galvanized by raw percussive rhythms that seemed to rise not from the orchestra pit but from the heaving bosom of the earth, incited a legendary riot at its first performance. Maurice Ravel immediately called Stravinsky "genius," and the works became, as Pierre Boulez says, "a point of departure for a new concept of rhythm and esthetics."

Nostalgia: The outbreak of World War I found Stravinsky and his wife, Catherine (who bore him four children before her death in 1939), taking refuge in provincial Vaud in Switzerland. Such works as "Les Noces" looked nostalgically toward Russia. But with the revolution there in 1917, the conservative and deeply religious Stravinsky became an impoverished exile.

When he rejoined Diaghilev after the armistice, Stravinsky turned his back on Russia and committed himself to the Western traditions. Beginning with "Pulcinella" (1920) and ending with "The Rake's Progress," Stravinsky rid himself of any Dionysian vestige ("One wants no more of this overfeeding") and pledged his allegiance to Apollo, to the idea and the glory of form, to objectivity, clarity and symmetry.

Stravinsky's neo-classicism meant using the classical subjects, as in the splendid oratorio "Oedipus Rex" (1927). He used such classic means as counterpoint, a double fugue in the harsh, brilliant "Symphony of Psalms," the Phrygian mode in "Orpheus" (1948), choruses straight from Gluck in "Persephone" (1934), a far different rite of spring than Stravinsky had created in 1913. He reduced his instrumental means, abandoned rhythmic experiments and concentrated on refining clarity, precision and austerity. In his work the past and the present illuminate each other.

Strings: Asked if he had been thinking of Greece while composing "Apollo," Stravinsky replied, "No, I was thinking about strings." What was the difference between "Rite of Spring" and "Symphony of Psalms," he was asked. "Twenty years," he answered. He had his critics, those who felt that he had betrayed his prewar revolution and gone "back to Bach." "Rape may be justified by the creation of a child," responded Stravinsky. His new music was accused of inexpressiveness. "Music," he said, "is, by its very nature, essentially powerless to express anything at all..."

Stravinsky's last great surprise was perhaps the cream of the jest. He and his second wife, Vera, had settled in the U.S. at the outbreak of World War II, in Hollywood, not 10 miles from where Schoenberg lived. The two composers met only once, at the funeral of a mutual friend. Soon after the death of Schoenberg in 1951, Stravinsky, at the age of 70, adopted serialism—hitherto his polar opposite. He started off tentatively at first, then more emphatically in "Canticum Sacrum" (1956) and the peerless Balanchine ballet "Agon," a year later, and then totally in a religious work, "Threni," and two more Balanchine ballets, "Movements" and "Variations."

Stravinsky's music became more and more concise and concentrated, music at once so spare, so intense, so mathematical that Balanchine called him "the Einstein of musical art." "For me," Stravinsky explained, "liberty consists in freedom of action within the narrow limits I have imposed upon myself."

In his prime, Stravinsky was worldly, a fussy dresser, a fastidious gourmet, a devotee of the theater, and a hypochondriac who appeared to believe that large daily doses of Scotch warded off colds. At the same time he was a prodigious reader, insatiably curious, with a weak spot for games, especially Scrabble, for which he carried around a special dictionary when he traveled. If he disliked anything, it was boredom. Of Tolstoy's "War and Peace," he said, "I liked the war but the peace was unbearable."

Wit: "Our Igor," Diaghilev was heard to say, "always money, money, money." Because of his love of money and Venice, Stravinsky was called the Merchant of Venice. He once designed a monogram for himself, converting the letter S into $. He generally composed only upon commission. "The trick is," he said, "to compose what one wants to compose and get it commissioned afterward."

He was renowned for his caustic wit, especially in his writings, which include countless articles and eleven books, much of it written in collaboration with conductor Robert Craft, who has for twenty years dedicated himself to being Stravinsky's alter ego. The six volumes of conversations constitute one of the most extraordinary and literate artistic legacies in history. In the most recent volume, "Retrospectives and Conclusions," prophetically titled, Stravinsky remarked of conducting that, "like politics, [it] rarely attracts original minds." Rachmaninoff is described as "a six-and-a-half-foot-tall scowl." When Stravinsky went back to Russia in 1962, he was received by then-Premier Khrushchev, who compared life in the Soviet Union with that in India. Stravinsky commented later, "I think he wants India."

Smell: Before accepting the unexpected invitation to visit Russia after 48 years and see his work performed there, Stravinsky suffered agonies of indecision. But when he was there, it was as if the intervening years had never happened. "You see a very happy man," he told an audience in Tchaikovsky Hall. He made a speech saying, "The smell of Russian earth is different... a man has one birthplace, one fatherland, one country..."

It's too late even now for Igor Stravinsky to go home. But according to his wish, he will be buried in Venice, the city he loved, where so many of his works, especially religious works, were first performed. In ancient Byzantine Venice, which has always looked to the East, there is a Russian corner in the cemetery of San Michele. There lies Diaghilev. There, too, the great Igor Stravinsky, who, no matter how hard he tried, could never free himself from the bondage of Mother Russia, will be free at last, at rest at last.

We are really pleased

Dear Bob:

Forgive me for the delay; yet, since my return life has been quite full.

Regarding the academic aspect I gave Mme. Steinert the rough draft of my memoire last week. This past Wednesday during and after lunch we had what became a very favorable discussion. Her reaction pleased me. On Monday we will have another meeting at the minds with M. Lohy. The latter, who is the Adviser to the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs and with whom I have had a seminar this year, wants to work with me on my dissertation. I am most fortunate! He has what I have come to admire 'that French mind', clear, logical thought. The suggestions that Mme. S. gave me concerning word-changes and sentence-elaboration should not take long. All that remains is a bibliography and then, I can present the final version.

Also, Mme. S. had some work for me for the course in which I am her assistant. I had to go down to the 18th and 19th Centuries which never really bothers me. Then, there have been my English classes. And here endeth this phase of existence.

Genève has been richly blessed by Spring - therefore, many hours have passed in the rays of the sun at lakeside. The gardens and parks again reveal the joy of color. The evenings simply sweep me away.....

To Yugoslavia I brought a bathing suit, some books, paper and a tired, confused mind. I stayed with the Sea, which is her 'heart', and that unravelled the latter - at least until I returned to Venice but that is another chapter. Although I was alone, a state of being which assumed curious dimensions, the hours were shared with many.

From Geneva I took the train to Venice during which I read Thomas Mann's Death in Venice. Greeted by a soft rain, that evening I walked her narrow ways, crossed her innumerable bridges and gazed across the lagoon. The following morning I took an early train to Rijeka, Yugoslavia. The ride was passed with an American who was in the process of going everywhere and nowhere, a young French girl who was on her way to an Adriatic Island to spend Easter with a friend, and a Yugoslav who was quite helpful for orientation. A surprisingly large Port spreading along the Coast, Rijeka for me is a point of departure. That I did the following afternoon aboard the 'Novi-Sad' on which I had the pleasure to spend the next eighteen hours.

The combination you know; sea, sun, gulls, ocean-spray and air; together they are my home. Throwing bread to watch them dive, I observe all the gracefulness to motion that a gull provides. The songs return: "How does the Wine Taste,"

"Where am I going?" the repertoire you also know. And then, you confront the silence of night which is a continuation of the feeling of peace that the sunset left you.

I had begun to talk with a Yugoslav working in the service room of the boat. When we docked at his home, Zadar, he took me to the Old City where one feels the glory that once was Rome. This architectural influence prevails along the Coast at least to Dubrovnik. Beyond I am not certain. It also provided contrast when I later went to Mostar and Sarajevo where the 'East' is truly felt.

Again aboard the Novi-Sad, we had a beer in the bar which also served as my bedroom one hour later.

At 6:00 a.m. we arrived in Split, a point of time from which the meaning of my presence in Yugoslavia gains unknown depth. The open-market was in the early stages of preparation while the streets were already crowded with people, a condition that was to continue to be present throughout my stay, throughout all of day and most of evening. It gives my first impression - fraternity. Together they walk, sing, converse, joke leaving a touch of their spirit with you.

The market was quite large and of course, had a little of every thing. Located in the walls of the 'Old City', which has one or two, most impressive churches I saw, is a courtyard of Roman manner. Out of this are narrow passage ways containing the melange of shops known to you. Although I only had two hours in Split, I came to a point of strong liking for this 'Old City', the people of the 'open market', and its location on the Adriatic.

Then, we were again at Sea, and it is between Split and Dubrovnik where the mountains of the coast fall to the Sea, holding at differing heights a village here and there, and the islands, which are the jewels in the setting, provide with the Sea a sight of natural beauty without equal. I had more bread for the year - more sensations from the sea - and a conversation with an Austrian woman, who when I told her that I was travelling alone, first replied: "You have no friends!", and then, for all real purposes, fell overboard. It was beyond understanding; while I found her 'group travelling', beyond joining. It was and remains very humorous!

(You round the tip of the Island, Hvar, pass between four islands and enter the Port. From Tuesday morning till Saturday morning before Easter, I stayed on Hvar. It is personal - ! Small cafés and restaurants, falling or climbing stairways, arches, very different churches, walkways, nearby isolated coves and beaches, rocks of all sizes and formations, 3208

sunrise and sunset, lie early meals - within, upon and for during all - many hours of thought and reflection with the Sea. I rediscovered how long the day is, the spirit of religion when I attended a Mundy Thursday, evening service in a small church on the hillside with six, elderly women in characteristic black from head to toe, and then, the same again, when on the evening of Good Friday the village has a processional from the main church, through the square and back to the church. In all the windows facing the square were lighted candles below which the priests, altar boys, choirs and congregation passed. Only the Latin chants broke the silence of night.

The first three days I was in the sun at the sea's edge. While Tuesday, the day of my arrival, I stayed in the Port, the following day after having had breakfast seated upon the frame of my window which overlooked the Sea, I took a footpath to a cove near the village of Milna. Crossing two substantial hills, passing gardens and vineyards, meeting a goat or mule here and there, and taking nearly two hours, I came to a spot where the cliffs fell to a small rocky beach which embraced the waves of the Sea. Here I stayed till late afternoon. Only two German couples who came to swim in the nude broke my dialogue with nature and the Sea. Later I climbed some rocks, wrote some cards and read a few pages.

Thursday I went to another cove taking what became my traditional lunch of oranges and bananas. It was so much like the previous day that I reached the moment when I asked myself: "Have you ever been away from Hvar?" The source of amusement was provided by three Yugoslavian women who to combat the weight problem decided that they needed a day of exercise at sea-side. The ritual they performed became quite humorous. In the evening I watched the sun set from the steps of the Monastery. Transformed into a cherry-colored ball it sank into the sea.

That evening I ate in a small restaurant at Port-Side and sang Yugoslavian folk songs with 5 or 6 natives. A couple bought us a round of beers - not bad for one who knows at the most right phrases in Yugoslavian.

Friday the sky stayed grey, gave a little rain, and thus provided me the hours to write my Memoire. This I began in a Café where I stayed throughout the afternoon and then, finished in my room... (to be continued)

Bob, I will mail this or else I may never finish. I have written for the rooms; when I hear, I will let you know.

Hope all is well with you — write when you have the chance. My best always,

Earl

Hand for Rita, No 'Applause'

By EARL WILSON

Rita Hayworth will not be taking over Lauren Bacall's starring role in "Applause" this summer because she's having trouble learning the part.

"Rita helped us make the decision," said coproducer Larry Kasha. "She knew she needed more time. She is going back to California to work on the part. Then she will head a national company later."

Miss Hayworth's decision, reached painfully last night after she'd struggled with the lines for several weeks, opened a free-for-all for the role. Anne Baxter, Ginger Rogers, Cyd Charisse and Eleanor Parker are being mentioned.

Kasha said, "Rita was a terrific dame through the whole thing. She is singing marvelously. She just happens to work slowly."

"She is a slow learner like so many of those Hollywood actresses. They're not required to learn scripts fast. So it takes them five or six months.

"Lauren Bacall," he pointed out, "worked three months just getting into physical condition for the role."

Anne Baxter's friends want her to take the Bacall role. They think it fitting, since in 1950 she won an Oscar nomination for playing Eve in the Bette Davis movie, "All About Eve," on which the stage show is based. Now she would in 21 years have come around to playing the older actress, Margo Channing, who is deceived by the young actress Eve in her ambition to be a star.

"That would be a terrific thing with Eve of 1950 playing Margo in 1971," Kasha said. "But we're talking to a number of girls."

One who's disappointed about Miss Hayworth is Gretchen Wyler, standby to Lauren Bacall, who's never been called upon due to Miss Bacall's good health.

"When I heard about Rita having trouble with lines," she said, "I thought maybe I'd finally get on."

MD to Check Sick Serpico In Cop Trial

By MARC KALECH

A Police Dept. surgeon will examine wounded plainclothes patrolman Frank Serpico today to determine if he can resume his testimony in the departmental trial of a police lieutenant accused of tolerating corruption among his men.

Serpico was excused yesterday after undergoing about an hour of intense cross examination because he complained of "pressure in my head." He was shot in the head Feb. 3 while attempting to make a narcotics arrest. Bullet fragments lodged near his brain remain there after the wound was judged inoperable.

Explains Payoff Jargon

Serpico testified that police Lieutenant Richard Saxton was present at a conversation where other officers discussed how the proceeds from "pads" would be picked up.

The plainclothesman explained that a pad is protection money that a gambler pays to police to avoid arrest. He said a gambler on a pad is known as a "cousin."

He also testified that Saxton "asked me why I didn't take my money" from the pads. "It was suggested by Lieutenant Saxton that if I didn't have any place to stash it, I had plan."

row to answer questions if the need arises."

Serpico's testimony before a grand jury last June resulted in the indictment of six officers on perjury charges.

The formation of the Knapp Commission to look into city-wide police graft was a direct result of his disclosures.

Dear Bobby poo,

I certainly hope that tutto va bene - working w/ my uncle is fun, fun, fun. Actually it's total chaos. In any case, I will have the money to pop across the pond, but am still en train de décider. You'll never guess who called me the other night - Oh, come on! play. Well, I'll tell you anyway. Miss. J. Gross. Actually she sounded quite good & was terrifically excited about me coming to New York & going to the big C & of course, your being there. Last night I saw the funniest movie in the whole world. Woody Allen in "Bananas". You must see it. Hope your schedule is working out. I might go up to N.Y.C. next week whilst there pop in on Miss Gross.

Cher Robert,

Chaque homme, quel qu'il soit, doit avoir un peu d'amusement chaque jour. Pour toi, qui étudies neuf heures par jour, cet amusement est arrivé. Le voici sous forme d'une lettre, ou bien un petit chef d'œuvre houghtonien!

Depuis ton départ, il y a un mois, je crois, beaucoup a changé. Nous sommes maintenant à Fallbrook pour faire de la babysitting pour les chats de M. Bob Brown, qui est à la Floride pour toujours. BARBARA y ira environs le 1^{er} septembre. Nous avons quitté notre apt. à 3rd St. le 1^{er} juillet. Nos meubles sont chez Kim à Philadelphie (lieu de naissance de la princesse Grace, née Kelly.) David, Peggy et Georges nous ont assisté avec le déménagement. Nous avons, comme toi, loué un camion et le voyage d'Oswego à Philadelphie s'est passé en six heures. Nous avons dit bonjour en passant par la ville de Charbon mais je crains que tu ne nous entendassent pas !

Quant à David, il n'est plus ici.
Puisqu'il ne travaille pas, ses parents lui ont demandé de retourner chez eux pour quelques semaines. Il doit peindre les murs de la maison pour une certaine somme d'argent. Comme ça il peut retourner à Oswego pour l'été prochain ! Mais il va venir un peu plus tôt pour passer une ou deux semaines
chez nous, avant notre départ.
Il faut qu'on se dit rien, sauf que il
ne sait rien du tout de ce paragraphe, mais pas non, lui et Steve, sont déménagés à Kansas City pour travailler avec le gère de Steve. C'est presque certain, et, bien sûr, ils sont heureux.

Autre chose d'important : Fais avant mon accident. Elle n'était pas mal, personne n'était blessé, et de ce
qui on dit Fais ne conduisait pas.
L'accident s'est passé le jour de son
départ, je crois, près du Shaki-Ratch.
Rien n'avait pas eu depuis cette date.

En ce qui concerne l'année prochaine, nous serons à Chalon-sur-Saône - Nancy au lycée de filles, moi celui de garçons !

Nous ne savons encore notre date de départ mais elle sera après le 12 et probablement avant le 22 de septembre.
 Nous ~~te~~ tenons au courant de nos projets. Nous l'annonçons bien si tu pourrais venir nous ~~fa~~ rendre un visite quand nous sommes à Charbon. Si tu restes fidèle à tes études c'est certain que tu finiras avant notre retour. Une question se pose: où trouver l'argent? Étant à New York
 tu peux jouer Jeopardy - un jeu très adapté à ton esprit!
 Ça vaut la peine d'y essayer. Qui sait, tu peux devenir le champion sans peine - véritable extase! A bientôt - nous espérons à te voir pendant l'été et bien sûr à l'aéroport Kennedy! Etude très rigoureusement!

Dearest Bobicito,

How are you amigo? Eh! Actually it was a rapturous & stupendous surprise to receive your recent & yet belated epistolary communication. I thought perhaps that you had metamorphosed into Lemming, which, of course, would have been a fitting punishment for such a tardy response. However, I do accept your apologies & I shall put them in my pocket (you told me to do with them what I wished).

I'm very happy to hear that you're taken on such a Spartan Schedule. You're sure to be promoted to an Eagle Scout. I'm happy also to hear that your landlady is so generous with her telephone. She appears to me (especially with that name) to be a Victorian Tight-ass. In any case, I hope to see your shining face soon enough. (over)

As for my existence, it's been pretty much the same. I've been seeing between seven & ten movies a week & have been reading fairly copiously. I'm presently at a very important crossroads (not unlike Nelson in Racine's "Britannicus" - ha! ha! ha). It is: Shall I skunk & pop across the pond for a quick three week holiday. My reason says no - but you know how dependable that is to a base & lusty fellow such as my illustrious self.

Here's how it will work. If I leave, it will be on or about Wednesday of this week. I shall then return about August 10. From then, directly to apartment hunting. If I don't go, then perhaps we will start a couple of days earlier. I hope you find these arrangements suitable. There are many alternatives. For example, if I do Europe, you could meet me at the airport on August 10th ~~or there~~ &

then directly to apartment hunting. 2ue pense-tu de ça. There are so many possibilities, that it would be much nicer if we could talk.
Here's what I will do. Am sending this letter special delivery. If it arrives on or before Wednesday, get your little ass
to a phone booth or tell your fucking landlady
that you must use the phone & call me collect. 1st try my no. (301) 365-0843 &
then try (301) 365-0252, but for the love of Mike, keep trying. If, however, things somehow in some way fuck up, & I do go to Europe,
then I will write you from there & hope you will write me back & make some arrangements to meet me. If I don't go, of course there is no problem so much for that. So call through:

I will get your slides taken care of as soon as possible. I have not yet sent them ₃₂₂₆

to be developed, but will do so very soon.

Other news items - Va. is on her way to Reno for a divorce - Check this: she plans to study for pre-law while she's there. That will make another good story. No time now, however, to tell you, so it goes. at this point, I myself most royally to bed, to sleep off all the nonsense I've just said.

Love & kisses,

p.s. I thought you'd find the enclosed material spiritually uplifting.

Gracie Slick's Handbook of Radical Dos and Don'ts

— Etiquette for the Aquarian Age —

By Terry Catchpole

This must be memorized, if you wish to be a "he cat" in your city
next year.
Dig you
later B

Hey kids,

Your friend Gracie, lead singer for the Jefferson Airplane and composer of such dynamite numbers as White Rabbit and Somebody to Love, wants to lay something on you. I know you're already hip to the fact that Establishment culture is one big hassle of rules, regulations and restrictions, and we say off that! The alternative revolutionary counterculture is liberated, free form and unstructured, and we say right on! But dig this: Do you want to come on like some lame weekend hippie (or maybe an undercover pig!) . . . or would you rather be really into the scene from the start? This is no heavy trip . . . all you do is lay down a few cosmic basics in your head to help keep the good vibes flowing. Zap the bummers, score the highs and you'll be a boss dude.

Yours for better vibrations,

Greetings

The first routine to get straight before making any scene is how to come on cool. This can be a real downer unless your head's in the right place. Here's where it's at for different situations:

- A) Fellow Head (conversation not desirable)
Off: Wave and say, "Good morning."
On: Brief nod of head (approximately 5°), with a soft-spoken, "Hey" (approximately four decibels).
- B) Fellow Head (conversation desirable)
Off: Handshake and, "Hello, how are you?"

On: Offer joint or organically grown mango and say, "What's happenin'?"

C) Black Person

Off: "Hey," or "What's happenin'?"

On: "All power to the people," with clenched fist salute. (To give this salute, clench the right fist with the thumb on the outside of the fingers, extend the right arm at a 45° angle from the front of the body with the forearm at a 90° angle to the upper arm. Although this is the nationally accepted procedure, some variation may be practiced in your area — it is advisable to check with your local Black Panther or FBI office.)

D) Guy Greeting Chick

Off: "Haven't I met you before someplace?"

On: "Didn't we ball at the festival last summer?"

E) Chick Greeting Guy

Off: "Do you have a light?"

F) Chick Greeting Chick, or Guy Greeting Guy

Off: "How are the kids?"

G) Guy or Chick Greeting Straight

Off: Outstretched hand.

On: Outstretched palm.

Rap Starters

"Groups have had it — individual performers are where it's at."

"I tried working within the system, man, and it didn't respond."

"Do you believe that story about Janis still being alive and that she just wanted to get away by herself for awhile?"

"Do you think that cat over there is a narc?"

"Who does your tie-dyeing?"

"I'm thinking about hitching to Marrakesh this fall."

"Copping dope's no hassle for me — I know a cat who gets it straight from Mexico."

"Has the FBI tapped your phone, too?"

"You're under arrest."

Rap Taboos

Catholicism, the Lindbergh kidnapping, Pageant, books, Virna Lisi, the cooking of Provincial France, Winston and CeeZee Guest, the New Criticism, the search for Bridey Murphy, Audie Murphy, aperitifs and canapes, chiaroscuro, the tragic story of Herb Score, the cranberry scare, Neil Sedaka, World War II.

Rap Responses

Off: "Yes," "No," "What?"

On: "Heavy," "Far out," "Huh?"

Rap Stoppers

"Nixon is doing the best he can."

"Do you have any spare change?"

"They say Don Rickles is really a nice guy in real life."

"Red sky in the morning, sailors take warning; red sky at night, sailors' delight."

"Larry Csonka is the most underrated running back in football."

"After all, we're only human."

"Fitzgerald couldn't carry Nathanael West's typewriter."

"Are the Academy Awards rigged?"

Parties

Decide who's going to have your party and then, when you get there, say it was a surprise planned just for him. That way, he won't mind so much when you smoke up his stash, play slap jack with his Tarot deck, and feed his angelish Milk Duds. Of course, we don't have any hang-ups over such straight routines as "party manners". . . . don't rip off your "host's" floor pillow; do feign interest when approached by a repulsive, sexually liberated guest; play it cool with would-be suicides; and don't wipe the hookah mouthpiece before using it (it shows distrust).

Dating

The usual routine when a guy invites a chick to a demonstration or confrontation is for them to meet there instead of going together. This will make it simpler if the chick decides to leave with someone else, or if the guy runs into his Old Lady. If they are busted, the guy is expected to arrange the bail money and the chick should attempt to kick a cop in the balls.

Resisting Advances (Chicks Only!)

Off: "What kind of girl do you think I am!"

On: "I'm sorry, but I never do it with just one guy at a time."

Dress

The basic rule is to wear anything as long as it's freaky and looks inexpensive. Remember, though, to dress so that you won't come across like a member of the Establishment. Your safest bet is an Army-Navy surplus store.

Footwear

GUYS: Wear whatever you want, except ripple-soled walkers, Buster Brown oxfords, crepe-soled suede slip-ons, zip-front lambskin loungers, penny loafers, or rubbers.

CHICKS: Wear whatever you want except stiletto-heels, sling-backs or anything that appears in the Spring 1971 J. C. Penney catalog.

Headgear

GUYS: No lampshades, frisbies or propellor beanies.

CHICKS: No party hats, football helmets or turbans.

Bands & Beads

The matter of what headband and beads to wear, and when, is very simple. If the scene is before 5 P.M., wear your most colorful informal headband and beads. If it is before 6 P.M. and a formal gig, wear the same beads but with a more subdued, solid shade headband. If the scene falls between 6 and 8 P.M., wear the subdued band and a single strand of one-color beads. After 8, wear your basic black headband and a single strand of small white beads. (Note: If there is likely to be more than the usual token Afro-American, add a strand of chitlins.)

Insignia

Care must be taken as to when and where you display the two most important insignia of our culture — the peace symbol and the clenched-fist salute. As these are usually permanently stencilled onto clothing, this can cause obvious problems. Probably the best, most efficient solution is to buy reversible clothing, putting one symbol on each side, and learn to change quickly with the mood of your crowd.

Backpack

Here's a good example of how you can really freak out the straights by openly flouting their rules: Wear your backpack in front! Heavy!

Rock Concerts

First, if you're wearing something particularly freaky, walk purposefully up and down the aisle or hang out in the lobby until the concert begins. Once the music starts, place yourself in front of as many people as possible and scream as loud as you can when the lyrics are sung. Don't forget to keep shouting out the name of your favorite request number until you get some response from the stage. At the end of a set, instead of draggy applause, throw a chair, break a window, punch out a rent-a-cop, anything. Just remember, be crude! If you know one of the musicians playing, you'll be expected to wander on stage at least once during the concert and touch an amplifier.

Passing the Joint

The person providing the grass always lights the first joint, taking care that the match (no vu-lighters with hand-tied flies, please!) is held at least two inches away from the surface being lighted. After savoring the aroma, he should take a tastefully short drag and allow the fumes to roll gently around in his lungs. If satisfied that it is dynamite grass, he passes the joint to the person on his right, who inhales deeply and says, "Good shit, man"; each person in turn passes the joint to the person on his right and so on until it is back to the start, whereupon the process is repeated. When most of the joint has been consumed, the dude providing it designates his favorite person present to be the one to eat the roach. Or take it home. If he desires, the cat scoring the grass can also comment on its origin, growth, strength and vintage for the benefit of the others. A good all-purpose one is, "It's an unstrained, Tijuana lid with a slow rush, but I think you'll be zonked by its flashback."

Eating

Nothing can beat dinner time at the commune with your family and friends: all gathered around the food-laden, sturdy, wooden dining room floor. Here are a few pointers:

- Centerpieces: These displays always lend a final finishing touch to the eating area. Among my recommended centerpieces are a ground shruh, a clock radio or a small child.

- Honored Guests: Filmmakers, musicians, Indian sages, Weathermen and other visiting dignitaries should be seated at the head of the floor, above the incense.

- Food: Should be something small and plentiful, such as rolled dried apricots, sunflower seeds or dirt. Remember, a proper balance of yin and yang is more important than cost, taste, preparation or life support.

- Courses: The rice course should always follow the vegetable course, with the nut course first and the fruit course last.

- After-Dinner Music: Nothing caps off a fine communal meal better than a round of group singing. This helps to settle the stomach, relaxes the mind and will look good if anyone comes to make a movie or write a Life article on your commune.

Wine

The basic rule-of-thumb is to drink sweet wine with hard drugs, dry wines with the soft stuff. For example, Mountain White is ideal with mescaline, while Mountain Red is right on with grass. To help you remember this rule, I have composed a little poem:

Hard and sweet, soft and dry:

A tasty toke and a heavier high.

Weddings

If a guy and a chick from different communes decide to become Old Man and Old Lady, the chick's "family" is expected to rip-off the goodies for the marital feast. The guy is responsible for renting the meadow, writing the ceremony and hiring the band. (It is perfectly acceptable for the chick's former ball to be in the band.) The person performing the ceremony should be able to recite passages from Kahlil Gibran, roll his eyes and look halfway decent in the nude. The bride and groom can wear whatever they want as long as its freaky and her nipples show.

Anniversaries

There are eight milestone anniversaries in a marriage, each with its own distinctive symbol:

- 1 year: Glue
- 5 years: Grass
- 10 years: Methedrine
- 15 years: Mescaline
- 20 years: Acid
- 25 years: Cocaine
- 50 years: Heroin
- 60 years: Strychnine

Naming the Child

You may give your child any surname at all as long as it has never been used by any person before in history. Among those still available are "Marshmallow," "Treetop," "Garage" and "Turd."

Street Sitting

This is what the revolution is all about — achieving such goals as your right to sit wherever, however and whenever you want. The way to do it is for you and your friends to select a heavily trafficked part of the sidewalk and sit in such a manner as to take up as much space as possible. Maybe then they'll start paying attention to the rest of your demands.

Hitching

The only important thing to remember when hitchhiking is to assume an expression that lets the driver know that you don't really give a shit whether he picks you up or not.

Flag Burning

For instruction in the proper way to burn an American flag, see YIP Pamphlet No. 103C.

Slogans

Nothing can be more of a bummer than shouting the wrong slogan at the wrong time. Imagine your humiliation when you begin chanting, "1=2=3=4, We don't want your fucking war!", only to discover the gathering is a rally to support the Arab guerillas, or how you'd feel if you shouted, "Get the pigs!" at a meeting of vegetarians! If you are unsure as to the purpose of a demonstration and can't make out what the other kids are shouting, it is best to stick with an all-purpose slogan. "All power to the people" is especially apt for such emergencies, as the others at demonstrations are usually people, and everyone feels they could use a little more power.

Farting

Though strictly taboo in Establishment social circles, the counterculture recognizes the fart as just another natural bodily function. However, it is possible to fart improperly and make an ass of yourself. Here are some bummers to avoid:

- Giggling after.
- Saying anything to cover up a fart, such as, "Who knocked?"
- Farting when fine incense or expensive grass is being burned.

- Farting during a conversation with a Panther.

Being Busted

The only proper attitude when you are busted is one of insolence, antagonism, noncommunication and total non-cooperation. However, once your friends leave and you are alone with the pigs, it is acceptable to finger your dope connections in return for a "slap on the wrist." As the Lovin' Spoonful used to say, "A snitch in time, saves fine!"

Panhandling

There is no better way to show your contempt for the Capitalist Establishment than to ask its members for money. Frequently, when you ask them for spare change, the capitalist pigs will say something like, "Why don't you get a job?", whereupon you articulate your further disdain for their system and its hollow values by saying, "Fuck off."

Ripping-Off

Ripping-off is the counterculture's "favorite American pastime," replacing such dull straight pursuits as squash or golf. It's a fun game that can be played by one and all, where you're the player, and the store owner, manager or clerk is it. Pick out what you want, cop it and run! If caught, you should shout real loud: "I'm liberating this [name of object] in the name of the oppressed masses of the Third World and of [your home town]." Remember, everything belongs to the people, and that includes such outtasight items as hotel guest towels and soap, hospital sheets, restaurant ashtrays and any stray tips lying around the table. Dig it and get it!

That's all brothers and sisters! Ciao for now, and don't forget, "It isn't the number of pigs you off, it's the thought that counts!" □

"Mr. Murray! When the Titanic went down, the ship's orchestra stood fast!"

News of the Month

In the wake of the controversy over the renaming of the Place de l'Etoile the Place Charles de Gaulle, there are indications that the Pompidou Government intends to reverse itself and seek some alternate form of memorial sometime this spring when French emotions have returned to their usual state of pointless disturbance. Some of the many proposals for substitute expressions of national regard:

1. Rename the sunken French submarine Toulon, the Charles de Gaulle. Christen it with champagne-filled depth bombs.
2. Install an Eternal Siren next to the Eternal Flame at the Arc de Triomphe.
3. Create a special medal for exceptional bravery, the Croix de Gaulle, to be awarded only to Germans.
4. Rename the Boulevard 11 Novembre a 4:40 P.M., the Boulevard de 7 Octobre a 12:30 P.M.
5. Rename France's Gaulois Disque Blue, world-famous cigarettes, de Gaulois Disque Morte.
6. In addition to the seats already reserved on buses and subways in Paris for pregnant women and citizens badly wounded in the war, set aside seats for anyone who can explain de Gaulle's foreign policy.
7. Name after de Gaulle the French portion of the British French Concorde SST, including the wings, the nosewheel and the bidets.
8. Name the French half of the proposed Channel Tunnel, le Tunnel General de Gaulle, and, as an added honor, arrange for it to miss the English end by 200 meters.

At the same time, word has been received that an attempt by adherents of the Quebec Liberation Movement to have Montreal renamed Montdegaulle was quietly shelved after a poll of 1,500 Quebecois revealed that all but six pronounced both "mongong."

The Union Chemical Co. has announced that a shipment of 5,000 gallons of ultra pure mercury, destined for its giant petro-chemical facility in Stumfton, Ind., was spoiled when a worker, during a routine inspection, inadvertently dropped a tuna fish sandwich into the tank car in which it was being transported. Company spokesmen said the mercury was found to contain .5 parts per million of tuna and is considered totally unfit for industrial use.

Apparently attempting to clarify the bounds of the "agreement" it claims to have with Hanoi, the Nixon administration has released a background document detailing the circumstances under which the U.S. feels free to bomb North Vietnam under the doctrine of "protective reaction." The bombing will be resumed, according to the document: If North Vietnamese soldiers "lock onto" unarmed reconnaissance planes with binoculars or turn to look at them as they fly over, indicating a possible intention to shoot; if armed escort planes are fired upon after dropping bombs to discourage interference with the unarmed reconnaissance planes which they are protecting; if the North Vietnamese fire at lone armed bombers making craters for unarmed reconnaissance planes to take pictures of later in fulfillment of their vital intelligence gathering function; and if North Vietnamese continue to restrict the reconnaissance aircraft through the use of "cloud cover," "trees" and "night."

Following close on the heels of the decision by Playboy to dispense with airbrush retouching of its nude photography (or to airbrush in body hair strand by strand — no one is too sure), a number of other magazines appear to have chosen 1971 as the year in which to announce delicate taste innovations. Among the most noteworthy: The National Geographic will publish nude photographs of people with skin "not much darker than an Eskimo's" so long as their nudity "is a natural part of a degraded or childlike existence." Both Vogue and Harper's Bazaar intend to pursue their trend-setting coverage of the weird female body with major fashion spreads involving dead models; Time will expand its present use of "news-nudes" to include "areas where genuine topical interest outweighs conventional considerations of taste," as, for example, in a story on the effect of sonic booms on the female breast; The Atlantic Monthly will print a poem by Rod McKuen, "a short one"; the National Enquirer will eliminate the black eye-dominos that have been its trademark for 40 years, replacing them with smaller circles and "xxx's"; and Fortune will portray personal checks without the traditional "SPECIMEN" or "VOID" stamps.

Dear Bob:

Thank you for your
nice note-card.

We were glad to hear from
you. Hope you are well
and enjoying Hyde Park.

We know you are busy and can get a lot done while you are there. We will be glad to see you and hope you can return with Earl if you can or feel you can make it.

This morning had this clipping
in the paper. I send it to you.

as you had made a trip to Wolfboro with Earl.

It's cute. I light the candle
every night and I treasure
the gift of it and knowing that you made it makes a warm feeling of the gift

Abandons Liberal Economic Theories

Galbraith Seeks Co.

BY MIKE FEINSILBER
WASHINGTON (UPI)

Economist John Kenneth Galbraith called yesterday for a controlled American economy under which the government would make most wage and price decisions.

Abandoning the Keynesian theories which have been standard liberal economic dogma for the past 40 years, Galbraith said only permanent government controls can crack the economy.

His proposal drew fire from conservative Rep. Ben. B. Blackburn, R-Ga., who said America's free economy—despite occasional "lumps and headaches"—has provided a prosperity unequalled in the controlled economies of other nations.

Galbraith, a liberal Democrat from Harvard who formerly headed the Americans for Democratic Action, outlined a plan before the House-Senate Economic Committee under which the government would regulate the prices of the nation's 1,000 or 2,000 largest firms and the wages paid the members of the largest labor unions.

He said the controls would have to be preceded by a six-month wage-price freeze on the

Dear Señor Bobicito,

How are amigos? Well, it is splendid to be back on the continent. Actually the flight over was quite smooth. Turns no Queen Elizabeth, but likes.

In Amsterdam we managed to pop over to the red light district. Oh, it was delightful to satisfy my base & lusty needs. You should have seen the nervous little mouse that Calvin & I managed to pluck. Not a misplaced ounce of fat upon her voracious body. And all for 7.50.

Presently we are enjoying the culinary expertise of Paris. Ah, tis superb!

From here we are off to Tours, then Nice, Parma, & up to folks old for me & back to Washington (a very Parisian city).

If you have the time, you may take it upon yourself to send me a missive in which you tell me of all the excitement back in Hyde Park.

Write me at Amer. Express, N.Y. Love,

August 4

Dear Bob,

I've been wanting to write to you since your postcard from Jersey last August. I wrote to Sharon and asked if she could call Juanita to find out where you had accepted a position. All Juanita could remember was that you had gone to the same place as Steve Dabbs. Then, of course, I wasn't certain where Steve had gone!

Our big news is the birth of our son on Mother's Day, May 9! We are overjoyed with the addition of Colin Robert to our family. He is growing so fast - weighed 5 lbs. 13 oz. at birth and now tips the scale at 14 lbs. 8 oz.! Guess he's catching up for his tiny size at birth.

Needless to say, when Bob saw your card he said "Well, he certainly wouldn't have selected that one had he known you're now a ...rather, too? Ha! I certainly appreciate your thinking of me, however.

Are you teaching at SUNY in Syracuse? Somehow, Syracuse re: ge a bell with regard to Steve. How-is the dissertation coming - finished?
Now that two years have elapsed since our departure from Ston.,
I hear hardly any news of the French & Italian Dept. If your lines of communication are always open to Ston., please send me any news tidbits you have. Where is Inargis, or Carl, and is Elizabeth still in Chicago? How about Virginia Jones? I won't forget the marvelous 'surprise' birthday visits you paid me in '68 & '69. I know you always waited until I was completely unprepared for visitors!
Bob is happy with his position

here, and with the sad state of affairs for physicists, we're so happy he accepted a position when he did. One friend from I.U. is finishing his Ph.D. this summer and the only thing available was a post doc at U. of Pittsburgh. Guess the teaching field in almost any subject, however, has reached the saturation point. How are things with regard to trench professors - hard to find a job now?

Is Steve working on his Ph.D.
at SUNY? & give him my best when you next see him. I know-- they had a baby about a year and a half ago - right?

Hasn't some gal caught up with you yet? Or are you avoiding them completely? ☺

Id love to hear from you if you have the time in between your travels and teaching - Jill

Dear Bob,

Received your letter today -
Yesterday I forwarded to you a letter from the Opera Co. and a Record of the Month letter and a personal letter - now I am enclosing a "post card". You are very popular.

Russell Pohl called the other nite to talk to you (from Indiana)
I gave him your address but advised against calling you.

We had a week of rain ending
last Tuesday - it rained sometime each day for seven days till we had a very very heavy rain on Tuesday
we closed the courses for that day.

now the grass is growing quickly.

Glad you found a bus that went to Newburg, even tho it isn't a direct route, just to satisfy my ego.!!!!

Joey stopped in for a few minutes last night - she had a Buffalo friend with her.

Can't think of any news to tell you. The writing on this card (enclosed) is the wildest I have seen.

Say Hi to Earl and tell him to come again - such a rushed departure you made from here. were you "ill" all the way home?

Deärie,

It took me a while to get your address, but Mom was here last weekend and delivered it with the warning to get on the stick and use it before the end of the month, and you've got to admit this is some kind of a record for promptness-plus Montello. We loved getting your card and were anxious to let you know that we're doing our best to whip little David into shape.

...and its really been no small chore. He's (in the last two weeks) cut two teeth, had roseola, colic and acute arm-itis; we were on the verge of autioning him off. Nothing beats a continually screaming kid in 90°weather. Actually, though, he is beginning to come around and has in the last couple of days mastered the art of sitting up...which helps his disposition immeasurably. (Even my mother remarked - as only mothers can - that he "seems to cry quite a bit")

What he needs is a good dose of his kind Godfather.

Other than that we're having a good summer. Sam worked all of last month writing math curriculum for the city and has been home this month. The kids and I are going to be lost

DO NOT PASE GRADE ON TYPOGRAPHICAL EL+RROZYRS

when school starts in the fall. We really haven't done anything too much, but have taken little day trips to the zoo, etc. and have made it a point to do as much as we can together. Chris has been to following Sam around and all the while, so that means that we spend most of our evenings on the road.

We'd hoped that we'd be able to spend a few days at Appokeepsink, but that was the weekend that David had his bout with Roseola (complete with temperature of 104) and I wasn't about to take him to the God-forsaken wilderness in that condition. You probably know that Peg bought the cabin from Joey Peg's done quite a good job of cleaning the place and has spent several weekends up there this summer.

How's Earl? Say hello to him for us...if he remembers who we are.... If its possible for you to make the trek North, why don't you come and bring Earl with you? We'd love it!

Had another Winter family wedding last weekend. ...almost as good as ours. You remember, I'm sure, Aunt Frannie-- the great blond with the marvelous ability to make everyone love her--- her son married a really dear Italian girl. We had the typical rowdy Winter

Knowing that half of our family only sees the other half at weddings, and then tries to make up for the grudges they've been harboring for twenty years, it was really quite remarkable.

Even Peg was here...for the first time since the last family wedding which was last May.

Think about you quite often as I make my weekly trip to the public market. Its incredible. The whole section is now w~~i~~ filled with farmers and I go absolutely out of my mind. Last week I throught I'd get some blackberries for a pie...until I discovered that the little man wanted a dollar for a quart basket. Knowing I could buy a whole piealready baked for almost the same price, I figured I could Jew him down a little. No way. "Lady, itsa a hellapicka blackaberrie. Ifa ya wannapicka blackaberrie itsa hella" Of course by this time the poor man was screaming itsa hella at the top of his lungs and I was becoming a little worried about him so I forgot the whole thing.

Tell me how your work is progressing. If I remember correctly, you were planning to use as much material as you could at Hyde Park and then go into the city to do more work. Right? You probably are really enjoying this reentry into the world of libraries and heavy research; I almost envy you. I really have the itch to go back to school and feel rather strongly that the longer I wait the rustier my mind will become. Although I do spend a lot of time reading I can really begin to see a decline in my energies to tackle a subject about which I know little or nothing ... something I'd rather not have happen.

Chris is getting up from his nap and I think it would be wise for me to get the typewriter put away before he sees it. Please let us know where you are and what your address is so we can keep in touch.

Love, Sam and Liz

Dear Bob,

One filthy postcard as ordered!
Sorry it wasn't a little earlier.
So how's life been treating you?
Have you made progress on your paper. Right now I'm sprawled out on the floor of my apartment.
I found a really nice one 3 room bath + kitchenette for $37.50. I'm hoping to stay here for as long as possible. Everything would be fine if it weren't for my boat back in the States. I think I might ^{even} make France for Xmas.
Spain is everything I thought and even more. There are still things I'm not used to but I don't think I ever will be. The Spanish "piropo" is unreal. It's really quite a ego builder at times. However it's more annoying

~~the~~ majority of times. But being me I'm finding a way around it; I'm learning how to give the "piropos" right back or I laugh and tell them they've got bad eyesight.

I haven't been all over yet
but the place I loved the most was Segovia. The castle in the postcard is ~~the~~ ^{where} Camelot was filmed. Of course you'll never guess who danced in the woods
singing "Camelot" or who bellowed
"If ever I should leave you"
in the courtyard. Oh Granada,
the Alhambra captured my heart,
however not so much the beauty of design but in ^{the} sense of time.
This time my imagination completely won out and I was back in the Arabian nights. I put my imagination ~~back~~ to rest when we started the picture reel and the Dance of the Seven Veils. We chuckled to myself and then continued on our tour to Sultan's bedroom.

Madrid, is nothing to scoff about either. There is just so much to see and do. But we'll have to tell you about this later. Right now we have oodles of letters and postcards. Take care of your cares, Sir Robert and write me if you can.

Happiest always,

A welcome to your new home knowing that not only your presence but also your interests shall make it full and meaningful.

Your note and check arrived today. Thank you for the support.

The end of Act I draws near. Today I finished the 1928-1932 correspondence. Then, tomorrow and Sat. today I will glance at the 'incidental' years (only 12)! For total I think the summer went well. And your presence gave it a 'certain' depth for which I am grateful. This, I think, you

Dear Bob:

It seems so strange that you are not beside or opposite me for I am writing this in the Thomas Jefferson Reading Room -

Upon my arrival in Washington the 'Yvill' returned that I have always associated to my presence in this City. She looks lovely - the wide avenues, the rich shades of green, the monuments and the traffic. I have come home!

Your apartment, I think, is most attractive, comfortable and you. Although the hours were too few, we made good usage of them and I already yearn to return. For you it will be a grand experience.

My visit here² is already hectic.
I was awake until 6:00 a.m.
Thursday morning helping Bill finish a report for his work while Don was at the typewriter with the final copy. It was ~~thesis~~- time revisited without the bibliography. Last evening we drank until 4:00 a.m. This morning passing the hours in conversation and with music. Nevertheless,
I arrived at the Lab C. at 9:30.
Now that I have completed some correspondence, I will turn to my academic tasks.

If you have the chance, I hope you will contact George Bell during his work in the city. He is our so good that you can make the Dartmouth-

Trust all is well with you.

Dear Bob -

Your letter came yesterday - about the Blue Cross - just a day or two after you went to New York
I forwarded a letter from them to you - that one along with about a dozen ^{others} since then - have you received any that I forwarded to you?

About the pictures - Louise mailed them to you either Thursday or Friday after you left here so you should have had them along with the Blue Cross letter, long ago - you had better check with the New York Post office.

How was the opera last night?
La Boheme, I believe.

I imagine it feels good to be settled, once more, when is it going to be a final "settling"?

I can see the reds coming into the foliage on some trees now -
we haven't had a frost to turn them quickly. they are just turning naturally - if we get cold weather
after the hurricanes send in more rain it won't take long for them to be in their "glory". We'll just have to wait and see.
what happens if you don't receive this letter - maybe you should drop us just a line - saying that you are getting mail at your address? so I'll know you are in touch with us.

We have had some rain but nothing like you and other places have been having. I had a good golfing day last Sunday, some on Saturday. We also had a storm last night, lots of wind - some thunder & lightning - we were supposed to get hail but none came.

The "new nine" - greens and tees for 5 holes are nearly ready for seeding - Russ has worked very hard on them. The grass is growing very fast, Walter just cuts constantly - it could be cut daily, what he cut yesterday could be cut again today.

and that's the address on your envelope
so that was right.

we'll be in touch soon - I hope

Love,

Mom

"The Bottoms"

Dear Bob:

Seldom does a letter contain the spirit that I found in your latest. It was good to hear from you and to learn that life can be a constant discovery. Any progress on the coast?

You need never question the inclination for me to write, but there is truth in your reference to the situation. The letter has been in constant flux which explains the delay.

Both day and evening have been full, so full that no letter would serve justice to the past two weeks of my life. For the moment I hope and trust that you understand.

The weekend of the football game is October 30th. As you know, I will leave Washington the evening of the 23rd, a Saturday. You only have to choose a date between these two for your arrival in New Hampshire. As a reminder my flight to Geneva leaves D.F.K. the evening of the 31st. My plan is to take a flight from Lyon to D.F.K. either late afternoon or early evening that Sunday. I would think we could do this together, at least that is my hope. What do you

Now, I have another question. Joan and Al will be in New York City the 14th and 15th of October. They would like to know if you could return with them the morning of Saturday, October 14th, in their car and spend a few days with us in Washington. Both Joan and Al are very anxious to have you visit their home. I doubt if there is any need for me to express my feelings or thoughts. Do come! Al promises it would be helpful to have your reaction; then, through letter or by phone the arrangements can be made.

My days, Monday through Saturday, have gone quite well at the Manuscript Room. I have been working between 7 and 9 or 10 hours a day leaving the evenings for me to be with friends. To date I have spent a few days with Bill and Joan, then I stay with Joan and Al. An evening has been spent with Mary, Frank and Joan, and friends of Bill and Joan. The schedule has been so flexible and changeable that there are moments when I am less than certain as to where and with whom I am to

cc.
 But the conversation has been rich.
 The feelings have been both deep and sincere and the reflection has been beneficial. I give the abstraction; yet
 I think you comprehend the meaning.
 I may, if not all, have asked for you and so I am I have said that you may appear.

This Friday I leave for North Carolina to visit Richard and Harvane. Although my journey is difficult, I will return to Washington the 4th, probably in the evening. For some reason I feel that there would be no adjustment of the problem if I were to stay at the ocean's side for a week or even longer.
 But at present this is not possible.

I realize that this letter has given little in detail. Even though a conversation or two would help, I will try within the next few days to show more precise thoughts and acute feelings. And if I can not accomplish this here, it will be one of my objectives when I am with Richard and Harvane. Hopefully the sea
 just might help.

What are your impressions of the Metropolitan, and further experiences with New York City? I would like to meet the silver boy and wonder through the market. My next visit will just have to be longer. In the interim I hope you are able to return to your work.

Please write me as soon as you can. Hope all is well with you and that you will say hello to Doc for me. My best always.

Ever,

Carl

Good Morning!!

Just a note to say that it is impossible to tell you when the leaves will be at their best. We are having days up in the 70's and nights in 50's. The leaves are starting to turn but not lots of color yet - if we have a hard frost they will turn quickly. The ^{date} set. for bus tours around the area to see the leaves is next Sunday the 10th so I can't tell you what to do. Why don't you phone us the end of the week or sometime convenient.

Dear Bob:

'Ginger' canceled my weekend in North Carolina and brought a disappointment that has slowly passed.

As an alternative I stayed with my work and the Library. The results continue to be favorable and effort takes the greater part of the day and early evening. Nevertheless, I am ready for a break. The time has come to empty my mind.

The following address is where Al and Joan will be next Thursday evening. It would be helpful if you could call around 6:00 p.m. for later in the evening they will be on Broadway to see "No No Nanette".

Tel: 929-2913

This morning Joan told me that she and Al will probably leave New York City on Friday evening, the 15th. Although the time is not definite, it will probably be after 9:00 p.m.

Because I will be with Al and Joan every next week and if it is possible, you might call 10th St., P.E. after 8:30 p.m. The number is: 546-3683. I suggest either Monday or Tuesday evening. A conversation might facilitate plans.

How is your life? I am anxious to know what has come to pass romantically, academically and socially — that should hopefully complete a paragraph. Have you come to a decision in regards to New Hampshire and the end of the month? My plans remain unchanged.

I continue to share my after hours either with Bill and Jan or on Capitol Hill. All have been too good to me. A few lunch breaks have enabled me to update former colleagues in the Library. And as diversion I have seen two art exhibits, one on the American Stage at the National Portrait Gallery and the one at the National Gallery which is a display of John Sloan's paintings. Due to lack of tickets I have yet to visit the Kennedy Center. Now we have turned our attention on the National Theater and a new play directed by Mike Nichols. It would be grand to see a play when I leave the house. Maybe the Tilton Players have planned an evening of Miller or Williams?

When you have a moment, let me hear from you. Hope to talk with you on Tuesday and be with you next weekend.
My best always

Dear Bob,

Hope all is going well in N.Y., and also that you've managed to get a little of the excitement of the city out of your system so work on your dissertation can progress ~~very~~ rapidly. Things in Chalco are going very nicely. Jay and I have become something of celebrities since we are the first two Americans to spend much time here. We are always introduced to others as M. et Mme. Les Américains.

We both finally got our "explosions de temps" today, and ~~our~~ our schedules could not differ any more. If I go in the morning, Jay goes in the afternoon, and vice versa. I'm sure we'll manage but it will be a bit of a drag. We are both also teaching a night course for adults at 22^e rue de la Paix. Too bad it's only for one hour a week.

Jay's basketball playing, in addition to being fun for Jay, has also been kind of productive as far as friends go. Three people who play over all kinds of vineyards and all, here we will be spending alot of time in the 'caves de Bourgogne'. The practice is 2 fois par semaine, and the games are on Sundays. That at least provides us with some activity, ~~so~~ since this town completely closes up at about 8:00 PM.

Our appartement is not too bad, we have kitchen, bedroom, and a tout petit salon. The only thing that bugs us at all is - we have an outhouse. The stupid thing has running water, but it is out in the courtyard.

We also have a favor we'd like to ask of you. We'd appreciate it immensely if you could take a few slides of the city, of anything you think foreigners would like to see, and send them to us. They have very few in the schools here, and we'd like something different to work with. Well, end of room - end of letter.

Dear Bob:

This is a note for as I near the end, I find that many more things which ought to be done.

You have had your quota of empty phrases. Fortunately a conversation is very near. And as you write, it could become a "Mr. Queen" - not a bad idea.

I enjoyed our conversation though Joan and Al thought we talked too long(?). They are more than disappointed that you could not come for the weekend and, also, that they did not hear from you when they were in New York. My sentiments I am sure you know. Yet a question, what happened?

With only three days remaining I only think of what I have not seen, read and hopefully digested. All the less, the effort has its results and I feel on sterner or firmer since you came I came.

Last Friday I stayed with Jack and Jackie which was a most enjoyable evening. With my six hours left I came to the library until evening. Then I had dinner with Frank, Don, Andy, Andy's sister and Helen Galt at Frank and Don's apartment. It was between 4:30 and 5:00 am. Sunday when I went to bed to sleep until 7:00 am. After leaving Frank at the airport (he only had to work 12 hours Sunday) I read myself at Bill and Don's. For brunch we had eggs benedict and in the afternoon we walked the C & S line from Fitcher's Post house toward the District-Maryland line. It was another nice evening, Sunday, having dinner with Frank and Helen, dinner with Bill and Don. Yesterday and today I have made the library. Yes my left eye is getting better. I remember to call on next week - hope you are well - and anxious to see you,
Earl

Cher Robert,

I've decided it's about time I started stuffing my mailboxes, and maybe, in return, my own will become a little more interesting. Frankly, until now, I've found it a bit difficult to write letters, since I wasn't at all sure that I would stay here. That is to say, the first month here was such an enormous hassle that I was, sorry, at times, that I had chosen Paris at all. Especially after meeting a lot of the other American assistants who were on their way to places in the provinces with exotic sounding names. But things have looked up tremendously since I found a place to live. That was no small task, especially since apartments and rooms are rented, for the most part, through real estate agencies, who charge a whopping fee. But I finally gave up, and had a nice room within one day - in the 16^e, in a big apartment building, with my own balcony and all. As I'm sure you can understand, it's particularly important to have a good place to live in a city like this, and I was determined not to end up on the sixth floor with no hot water. My room is really nice, and I'm having a good time decorating, collecting posters, etc., and finding the minimum of furnishings. Although the quarter is not quite so down to earth as I might have liked, it has lots of interesting nooks and crannies, and I've managed to scout out the expensive restaurants and such.

In spite of my hesitations, the life situation seems to be a blessing; at least it's a good place to meet people, and it makes me feel like I really do have some place where I do, in fact, belong. In this city many of the 300 or so teachers are young and lively, and I've been enjoying teaching a lot of English classes. There are several other assistants (3500 students, after all) and we have been doing a lot of gabbing, while patiently waiting for someone to decide to give us teaching schedules! But first, well, they have to do a survey of all of the students' ~~habits~~ ^{preferences}, to find out when they're free, etc. Thankfully, they're being asked whether they'd rather have a British or American assistant. That is, no one can complain too much about my baroque accent. Also, I'll mainly have students in terminale, since that year they study America, and, especially, students who are interested in becoming the U.S. I've already gotten a little taste of it, writing a premiere class. Very jolly, and they were overflowing with questions for me. I'm getting a little impatient to start teaching now, but since Madame le censeur is ill, my schedules won't be done until at least next week. And officially I've been "looking" since October 1st. At least I've met some fun people, with whom to tear around town, in a promenade in the Bois de Boulogne (near me), and roam the Latin Quarter.

Speaking of which (the L.Q.), I've had all the normal ennuis of a woman alone in Paris, being stalked, etc. Part of that was solved by moving to the 16^e, where it rarely happens, and also by developing a rather low view of Frenchmen in general and Arabs in particular. Of course maybe it's unreasonable to them that a woman in Paris could possibly want to be alone, but that's how I feel most of the time. So far, every Frenchman I've said more than five words to has confirmed all of my suspicions, and I'm patiently waiting for some exception to appear.

What incredible red tape registering at the Sorbonne - but finally, after innumerable visits to the office for strangers, I emerged triumphant with my carte in hand. Supposedly, I'm doing a seminar, but will go to classes out of curiosity, grudgingly, and to get my old head working. Supposedly, I'm supposed to be teaching in the part of the Sorbonne where I'm registered, which would be interesting. At any rate, classes don't start there until at least early November. Although I felt pretty much out of the mood to work, I actually have begun with Stendhal, for fun. And Anna really left me puzzled, until I read the editor's introduction, and figured out what was the matter with the guy. Maybe I'm just completely dense! Anyway, I'm again rolling with laughter through La Boue, and enjoying it tremendously. Besides that, I have been reading a lot, curling up in my cozy room, forgetting hectic Paris outside. That's the only way to deal with big city life, it seems, especially when it's a city ruled with aggressive bureaucrats. Not that I'm really escaping as much as possible (although there's some of that involved); it's just got to be handled with a sense of balance. So I sleep in buses often, and take full advantage of the rights inherent in buying a cup of coffee in a cafe, and stay for hours.

Haven't been being much of a tourist, since for several weeks I have all these details to take care of, and, then, just when things were looking up, the metro went on strike for 10 days! Needless to say, Paris was pretty unbearable, with endless traffic jams, filthy air, and pedestrians breathing it all in. Finally, the conductors went back to work; the strike was so unpopular that I'm afraid the hordes would have attacked them all on sight at the end of it, if it had lasted much longer. Of course by the end of it I ended up with a bad cold, and have been in bed for most of the last 5 days.

You would be so proud of me - I've met a graduate student from Wisconsin here, and have ended up explaining to him, at length, why Bloomington is so much better, and why I'm (was) happier there. We've been taking in a lot of nice little restaurants (or rather taking in food at nice...) and complaining about the French a lot, although I've had some pretty good welcomes, especially at the lycée. By the way, re Bloomington: I really miss it and everyone, teaching, my stems, etc., but am frankly glad to be out. Especially in a place where your toes tingle because it's so busy, or frozen even, but at least not sleepy. The fall concert season is getting started, and this week I'm going to four jazz concerts at the Theatre National populaire at the Palais de Chaillot (right up the street) - including (tell Joel) first, Melomons Monk, Al Blakey, Dizzy Gillespie, then Preservation Hall, then Soft Machine, and finally Miles Davis (!!!) Not very French, but who would ever dream of seeing Miles Davis for 10F! Elizabeth Schuyrkopf is coming on Nov. 12, and, in the next few weeks, a lot of other good things. It's like New York, except cheaper and easier to get tickets. Hopefully you've been taking advantage... New York and all. I'm anxious to hear.

1/ I'm also again turning into a full fledged flick freak, spending all my nights at Latin Quarter Theatre. At this rate, with all my entertainment, plus all the hours spent getting my work done, I'll never be able to get to London for Christmas. I am thinking of going to Amsterdam during the Toussaint week, but have to watch my sons.

No word from Jamie yet, and I'm assuming she's in Lille by now. I did suggest she stop and see you when I wrote to her and certainly hope to hear from her, and see her soon. Not a word from Bloomington yet, where half the town is enjoying my stories for, sewing machine, etc and can't even find the time to write. So this week I'm dedicating to my correspondence and hoping for results. I can't exactly hear my soul to the telephone poles here, after all.

It really was good to see you, and all, while in New York, especially in my state of advanced panic. Luckily things have smoothed out quite a lot in the last few weeks, and I'm beginning to feel relatively at home here, especially since I've learned a lot from aggressive Parisians about getting things done. At this point, although Paul seems more and more manageable, I'd nevertheless like to get out for a few days.

By the way, at the orientation session for the American assistants, the Houghtons' name was on the list; I looked around and never saw them. They didn't miss much - lots of welcomes from Embassy people, a few interesting lectures, several bad ones, and a good, drunken reception given by Embassy people. If you should see, or talk to Earl, pass my address on to him. I do plan to contact him in Geneva, at my rate. I wrote to Sheryl this week - and with all the reporting in, it seems from time to time that I'm repeating myself!

Anyway, I hope all is well with you, and that you're really enjoying New York, and not locked up with your books - although the latter I'm finding a good thing to do in the city. Please give my best to Gail - I'll write soon, and try to be original. And please write, before I forget English, or become a hermit, or run away with a 50 yr old Frenchman with a chateau in the country!

Grosses bises,

Ellen

Dear Bob, Joel (and Miss Gross, too!)

It was something of a shock, but a pleasant one, to see you all at the airport. It feels great to have finally left the womb of dear old Bloomingdale. Lille is much nicer than I would ever have imagined - culture abounds. I've already seen The Barber of Seville, a Tristram film, tonight is Tchaikovsky night, and Wed. is the ballet Orfeo. Patrick Ratraidi has really organized the Eng. dept here not like typical French chaos. The only people I've met so far are my "colleagues" - they seem nice enough. I was really given red carpet treatment in getting all the paperwork taken care of - carte de séjour, etc. We don't start teaching until Nov. 8, but have to be here for cocktail parties and faculty meetings. Everything seems to be working. But

13 November 71
Geneve

Dear Bob:

I must begin somewhere but that is not too easy. The past two weeks have been as full as my research visit to the U.S. - you understand.

Before I center upon Geneve, Festschrift and memoirs, etc., I want you to know that it pleased me (and my family) to have you with us for the final act. I reflect upon our summer and that last weekend as the calm and the Fall as the storm. Our walk at Hampton Beach and conversation in the car later that evening helped me greatly. It reaffirmed my belief that you do understand - at least in part. Again, Bob, thank you for the hours, days and summer.

The first thing I wanted to find was the silence of sleep. However, an hour after my arrival home I had a seminar with Mrs. Steiner which was followed by a lecture that evening by Raymond. Then a group of us went drinking and I went to bed Tuesday morning around 3:00 a.m. Later that afternoon I had my second seminar with Mrs. Steiner and that evening I had dinner twice with different friends and did not retire until 3:00 a.m.

Wednesday morning.

I can barely recall Wednesday, and I missed my meeting with Mrs. S. Thurs.

day morning which was to discuss memoire, Halle, etc. Fortunately she understood and we decided to meet Friday morning. That we did and for your hours, the latter part included lunch, she told me of the politics
at the Institute, the personality conflicts
among professors and the only approach left to us, even though we both agreed not more than anything we would like to have our own nuclear war. (Halle gives the seminar in Strategic Studies) What was decided was that I would write a letter to Frymound, which has now been done.
I stated in part my disagreement with Halle, which was difficult to control both in length and language; asked if Prof.
Caroselle might replace Lacey because the latter had never submitted a written report; and inquired what I was to take as my next step, rewrite memoire, give a supplement based on my research during the past four months, or await the word of the Director, M. Frymound. It is at least for the last that defines my present status. Here ends this Chapter...

Last week I began to rediscover friends which fortunately continues until the present. Many hours have passed with drinks in hand and meals before us.
It then you know I have said hello.

And ever since I returned I have sought to recede that silence which has already been mentioned. For the past

Two days I have been on the upswing. Last night was particularly pleasant seeing with friends "The go between" which upon second viewing made me ecstatic. Then we had dinner in the Old City at a small, very smart - size of my parent's kitchen - restaurant which I have named "My Mother's Place". Around 1:00 a.m. we gathered in my room for coffee, wine and extended conversation. This went until 3:00 a.m. Today began this afternoon.

Outside it is quite grey. The snow in the Alps which has been falling in the greater part of la Suisse means rain in Geneva. That is what we have had. Now it is the off-season and Geneva becomes both local and fairly empty. I like this. At the Grand Passage where I have had lunch on several occasions there is a demonstration that has more than amused me. The fellow illustrates the use of a salad cutter which finds him now behind a pile of French fries, sliced tomatoes, cucumbers, etc. so that one can barely find him. He has a crowd of at least thirty and a technique of great range. The audience response is most interesting, to the extent that there was a man who brought his own un-

early sliced, ^{partially} cucumber to see if the latter would favorably react and provide the men with evenly sliced cucumbers. It did! Then one floor above
there is a fellow of at least 60 years.
He is setting a female wig with pin nails. This in itself almost becomes sad. But his audience is composed of women of an equal age and together
they become the material for a winter play. Nevertheless, the chess pie remains a delight and bargain.

The gulls and swans have been fed - one of my first acts. For two days we had a great wind off the lake which made the impression of the sea, that much greater. It still provides for me a very rich and varied experience.

My room is beginning to take shape
though my effort has been quite spasmodic. Some furniture has been rearranged and I have yet to hang prints,
etc. By Christmas I might finish, though which year I do not know.

This is a start. Hopefully I will hear from you and know what the past two weeks have done to you. You have my very best in both wish and thought.

Cher S. Robert,

We both just finished rereading your last letter. After having spent the last 1/2 hour laughing hysterically, I rather doubt I can equal it in ~~as~~ humorous content. Therefore - prepare yourself you are of our typical letters.

First of all, we would be "delighted" to accept your hospitality in the name of your friends in Paris. We will probably be going the 18th of February, during "carnaval." All our friends will be leaving Chalon for that week, and it's no fun drinking alone. Speaking of leaving Chalon, we will be going to Machingloubard and Rheylt, Northern Germany, for the two weeks at X-mas.

We'll be going with the German Assistant at Jay's L'écrit. It will be weird not being able to communicate with his parents - but all the German we know happens to be the "dirty words." Oh yes, and I can now count to 10 in German with an absolutely atrocious accent.

We spend most of our time with the other assistants (7 in all) and with the Basket ball team. Life has been progressing quite nicely, but very often on a few hours of sleep.
We have a tendency (same as last year) to party until 4 or 5 in the morning, and have a 8 A.M. class the following morning. The amount of wine we have consumed is amazing. We have surpassed threefold the number of pizzas we ate last year. The majority of it is commonly called "vinasse"
but it is better than nothing. As you can gather, we've had a number of international
"sweaty" drinks.

Our appartement is working out a little better now. I had a talk with Madame le propriétaire - rent lowered 50 francs a month, and a nouveau chauffe-eau. Someone else showed us how to make the heater work, so now we only complain to the outhouse. It gets ungodly cold out there.
And when the wind blows hard, the candle (the only light) goes out. If it blows
the paper of the rack, it could take 1/2 hour
to find it again in the pile of leaves on the floor. We are rather hoping the water won't freeze.

Our jobs are amazingly simple. There is no work to be done, hence we have alot of free time to do n'importe quoi, which is usually what we do. We are going to be experts on wasting time.

Well, it's time for din-din. We are trying something new tonight - Querelles à la provençale. They sound good - God only knows what they'll taste like! Well, keep in touch and take care - until?

Oh yes, if you send Name & Jay.
slides, also send cost and please - a list of what is what. Thanks

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Moyon:

Occasionally orders are received in our office that indicate clearly that the intelligence of the sender is, at most, an amorphous entity. Your order, however, seems to defy classification. Not only are you unable to perform the most elementary mathematics, but you also possess that rare ability of writing in the manner of an unlettered primate.

Furthermore, it is not possible to order one card. Our cards are preboxed and it is not possible to purchase them individually. We would greatly appreciate you erasing the word UNICEF from your lilliputian intellect (which should be a very easy operation for you) and strongly recommend that you dabble in the making of mud pies and chalk sketches instead of the sending of Christmas cards. Should you decide to extend your greetings to some of the esteemed residents of your wretched city, you might position yourself atop a well-chosen promontory and, in a stentorian manner, bellow forth.

We have not enclosed a return envelope nor have we supplied you with a brochure, hoping that we may never hear from you again.

Lovingly,

The US. Committee for UNICEF

English knopped latten spoons

Part 2

CHRISTOPHER A. PEAL

IN the first part of this article on latten spoons (The Connoisseur, April) the types, periods and development were discussed. The reappearance of latten spoons in the mid-sixteenth century will here be dealt with in greater detail.

The early and middle types of knop in silver and pewter—e.g. Diamond Point, and Maidenhead knops, and many others—do not appear in latten, but latten spoons do reappear with the forms of the late sixteenth century. In the minutes of the Court of the Pewterers Company for September, 1567, it is reported '... latten spoons lately invented by John God ...' John God certainly had not invented latten but he may well have been the first member of the Pewterers Company to use it; and we know that in 1565 Queen Elizabeth I granted patents for its manufacture in England. In 1568 all the latten patentees bonded themselves together into 'The Society for the Mineral & Battery Works'. Presumably 'Mineral & Battery' included mining, and making cannon; and no doubt the latter accounting for the greater proportion of their output. However, the Pewterers Company was already active in suppressing the manufacture of latten spoons by members of its company, and in 1567 'it was agreed by the whole Company that there should be no spoons made of

"Bras" or latten or any other yellow metal'. This ruling was repeated again in 1586. It can be presumed that they partially succeeded, since only five makers' marks are known which appear on both pewter and latten spoons: John God (1570+); 'W', early seventeenth century; 'W.S.' (1670+); Daniel Barton (1670+); and Gabriel Grunwin (Nos. 8 a, b, c and d). It will be seen that only one is of the sixteenth century.

John God's mark appears on pewter spoons with Acorn, Hexagon, Horse Hoof, Seal and Slip Tops, and on latten spoons with Acorn, Seal and Slip Tops. (There is also a Monk's Head in silver, bearing the same mark, but this is not very significant to this article as it was usual for members to present to the Company a silver spoon bearing their mark on being clothed with the Livery.) The 'IG' mark (No. 9 c, f, g and h) appears in two forms on latten and in two forms on pewter. But the marks are so similar in form that we can presume that they are all those of John God. All spoons bearing the marks are compatible with manufacture in the sixteenth century. There is one unpleasant suspicion: that since John God and the whole Company had been forbidden to make latten spoons, someone else may have been forging his mark. In another extract from the Pewterers Court Minutes of 1567, John God admitted to making only three dozen spoons, and he was forbidden to make any more; as indeed was the whole Company. There are several latten spoons existing today bearing his presumed touches, many more than the chances of survival and discovery would allow, assuming that he did make only three dozen. So either the touch is not his, or someone copied his mark to lay a false trail. Most likely he made many more spoons before or after 1567.

Nearly all the marks on the mid to latter seventeenth-century latten spoons have a pronounced family likeness and are unlike those found on pewter at this period. They are much larger and usually bear, in addition to two initials, two or three spoons (like squash rackets) displayed parallel to each other (Nos. 10 i and j and Nos. 11 a and b). When spoons are depicted in pewter touches, they are displayed crossed. One wonders why, at a time when the Pewterers Company was so actively suppressing the manufacture of latten spoons, the makers, if they were members of the Company, advertised their identity on their spoons. It could be assumed that in the seventeenth century the latten spoon makers were in the main not pewterers but a separate band of craftsmen—perhaps working under 'The Society for the Mineral and Battery Works', or its successors? However, so far no evidence or records have come to light to elucidate under what aegis these latten spoon makers worked, apart from the five pewterers' touches appearing on latten spoons. A very significant fact is that in the seventeenth century, when pewter was in its heyday, pewter spoons were ousted by latten, judging by the quantities of those which have survived. This is perhaps not surprising, since latten stems are so much stronger than pewter.

8. Four of the five only known English marks common to both latten and pewter: (a) 'W' early seventeenth century; (b) 'W.S.', 1670+; (c) Daniel Barton, 1670+; (d) Gabriel Grunwin, late seventeenth century.

11. (a) and (b) Comparison of 'E.H.' (pewter) and 'Double Whited' (latten).

10. Comparison of pewter and latten spoon-makers' marks. (i) Pewter spoon-maker—spoons crossed; (j) Latten spoon-maker—spoons parallel, sometimes two, on other examples, three.

9. The cause of much confusion: John God. (e) Recorded as appearing on both latten and pewter; (f) and (g) Recorded on pewter only; (h) Recorded on latten only.

Apostle Spoons

Apostle knops appear in silver as early as the fourteenth century, but in pewter they are of sixteenth-century form and rare. All examples in latten appear to be of the seventeenth century, and this writer knows of none bearing the nimbus. The nimbus is rare in silver and even rarer in pewter.

While we assume that in general a spoon was a possession as personal as a toothbrush, Apostles were surely made in sets, but may possibly have been presented singly to a namesake. It is most unlikely that any true sets by one maker exist today, as latten spoons were not valued and preserved as were silver ones. A set would consist of twelve Apostles and the Master, and sometimes also a saint of the owner's Christian name. The author owns some fourteen singles (Nos. 12 a to o), but is unable to identify them all. Because latten spoons were for everyday use, the knops did not warrant such superb moulds as those used to give the free-standing emblems on silver spoons, and so the emblems were probably almost always cast in with the body of the saints.

The knops are now often difficult to identify because they have become worn by corrosion, wear or over-cleaning in recent years to the degree of vandalism. The author has found it most valuable to compare doubtful knops with the latest complete set of silver apostles described and illustrated by Commander How—the Lambert set of 1626 in the collection of the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths (No. 13). It is immediately apparent, when comparing knops with the illustration, that the posture and carriage of the figures are very similar in both media. It is known that in early days, silver knops were cast by specialized makers, and there is evidence that in the seventeenth century the same system existed. Two spoons from different moulds, bearing different maker's marks, have identical knops. It is also a misconception that the existence of a gully (No. 14) running down the length of the front of the stem on late (c. 1640-c. 1670) Apostle spoons is proof of continental manufacture. This is just not true. Some are Continental, but the author can show some half-dozen with presumed English marks, including the 'Double Whited' (No. 15). Apostle spoons continued to be made until c. 1670. In silver, after the Restoration period, they were made only provincially and of poor quality. Certainly in latten both Apostle and Seal knops are of very poor definition when of late date.

In reference to No. 13, it will be helpful to list the emblems carried by Apostle spoons. Most existing silver sets have St. Matthias substituted for St. Jude, and usually another was omitted in favour of St. Paul. The others are as follows: The Master (Orb, and Cross and Benediction), St. Peter (Key, sometimes a Fish), St. John (a Cup), St. James the Greater (Pilgrim's Staff, sometimes a Hat as well—often like a tin hat on his shoulders. A Wallet may appear worn low on his left side), St. Andrew (Saltire Cross), St. Bartholomew (Flaying Knife), St. James the Less (Fuller's Bat), St. Matthias (Pole Axe), St. Paul (a Sword), St. Thomas (a Spear or a Girdle), St. Jude (a Long Cross), St. Simon Zelotes (a Saw), St. Matthew (a Carpenter's Square), St. Philip (a Short Cross, or Three Loaves).

As will be appreciated, the nature of many of these emblems are often difficult precisely to identify, especially when they are worn or broken off. The latter can be clearly seen in the illustrations here presented.

Those interested in latten spoons may now feel that the hundred years (1570 to 1670) of spoons—with Lion Sejan, Acorn, Writhen Ball, Seal, Horse Hoof, Slip Top, Gauntlet Seal, Strawberry, and Apostles—represent the most interesting period. Others may prefer to trace the evolution through the transitional to the early modern spoon shown in the Trifids, which are probably more easily acquired. The pewter spoon collector, who may have been trying to find analogies, may feel thwarted from what has been written; for although the late sixteenth and early seventeenth-century periods overlap lattens with mostly late Maidenheads and Slip Tops, the main interest period—of c. 1400 to c. 1570—is missing in lattens. Space limitations allow only generalisations and the keen student will want to delve deeper by physical inspection of specimens and by discussing the subject. As knowledge of the subject is far from complete, the author will be grateful to hear the comments of interested readers.

Dear Bob,

Just a Contact note -

We have had a little concern in our family - (if I wrote this to you forgive me - I included a number of notes in Christmas Cards and I can't remember if I wrote you a note) (its just old age).

Laurie has been in the hospital since Dec 1. She has had a kidney removed - 5 times its normal size - a cyst, and an excess amount of extra blood vessels, on the operating table 3 1/2 hours, she has been having a session with gas and has set backs with enemas making her sick so she wants to be home for Christmas but I'm not sure - she hasn't been up and very long or very many times. She gets very weak.

I'm sure we'll be seeing you soon,
you know - Santa Claus comes soon.
